House Group Rejects Four Pay-as-Earn Tax Plans

Ways and Means Subcommittee Is Assigned to Write New Measure

Agreed on 3 Points

Four separate pay-as-you-earn tax proposals, including a version of the Ruml plan, were turned down in succession by the House Ways and Means Committee late yesterday, and the task of writing a new one was turned over to a five-member subcommittee.

These decisions, coming at the close of five days of continuous closed sessions on pay-as-you-go taxation, apparently pleased the members. They emerged from their Capitol committee room smiling, after three bursts of applause sounded through the doors in the final minutes. The applause, it was explained, was in tribute to Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina.

Two of the plans rejected were originally suggested by Doughton. A third was the modification of the plan sponsored by Beardsley Ruml, New York economist, which was proposed by Representative Carlson (Republican) of Kansas, and the fourth was the plan of Congressman Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia.

Three Principles Indorsed

While specific plans met defeat, the committee indirectly indorsed these three principles in what Doughton has said should be a permanent new system of taxation:

1. That the new system would be based on the pay-as-you-earn idea.

2. That it should incorporate "withholding at the source," with income tax payments collected in bits from pay-envelopes and salary checks, as the Victory Tax is now collected.

3. That it should strike a compromise between all-out cancellation of one year of tax liability, and collection of two years in one.

Chairman Doughton said that the committee had instructed its subcommittee to "produce" a new tax bill including the pay-as-you-go and collection-at-the-source features.

Question of How Much

Representative Cooper (Democrat) of Tennessee, appointed chairman of the subcommittee, and other members indicated that a main point of decision would be how much tax forgiveness should be provided in making the shift to pay-as-you-earn collections.

Cooper called a meeting for 11 a. m. today, announcing that it would be closed and that no open hearings were expected. The full committee took two weeks of public testimony from Government officials and others. The subcommittee memberships included Representatives Disney of Oklahoma and Dingell of Michigan (Democrats); Knutson of Minnesota and Reed of New York (Republicans).

Earlier the Ways and Means Committee voted for the third time to report Disney's bill combining repeal of the President's $25,000 salary ceiling with an Administration-sponsored measure to lift the national debt limit from 125 to 210 billion dollars.

Yesterday's vote duplicated the 15-10 decision of last week, and was

Hecht Co. Cleared Of OPA Charge

The Hecht Co. yesterday was absolved by Justice F. Dickinson Letts in District Court of a complaint that it had wilfully violated the price ceiling, price recording and price posting regulations of the Office of Price Administration.

In denying an injunction asked by the OPA the justice said the attitude of the Hecht Co. was "not antagonistic but cooperative, and in my judgment an injunction would not be in the public interest."

Further Study Delayed

The House yesterday verged on outright revolt against the Administration's war food-production program as it came within one vote of writing a death sentence for an Agriculture Committee proposal for encouraging increased production of peanuts for oil and corn and wheat for livestock feed.

It took the votes of Speaker Rayburn and the occupant of the chair, Representative Magnuson (Democrat) of Washington to save from immediate death a measure that has partial Department of Agriculture support.

Foes of the bill then united behind Appropriations Committee Chairman Cannon of Missouri, a farm bloc leader, in voting to shut off further consideration until next week, a maneuver to gain time in which to gather reinforcements.

Two Attempts Made

The motion to kill the bill, lost on a 109 to 109 tie vote, was preceded by two separate attempts to get before the House amendments to remove for the duration of the war all crop production restrictions under the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Each attempt was halted by a ruling from Magnuson that the amendments, proposed by Representative Baldwin (Democrat) of Maryland, and strongly supported by the Republican leadership, were not germane to the bill.

Crop control machinery set up by the Department of Agriculture under the AAA is being used by Agriculture Secretary Wickard as the administrative foundation for getting farmers to produce war foods in enormously increased quantities while production of less needed foods is curtailed.

Opposed to Subsidies

If this machinery is wrecked by wartime suspension of the AAA—and a strong Republican-led coalition wants to wreck it—the next House move would be to force Wickard to abandon his program for encouraging farm production through "incentive" payments and give way to demands for higher agricultural prices.

Congress already has sought to ban "incentive" payments, or subsidies. It tried to outlaw them in the Price Control Act and earlier this week the Agriculture Subcom-

Army May Aid In Harvesting, President Says

Small Troop Units May Be Released For 2 Days at a Time

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday told farm leaders in Congress that soldiers could be released from camps in lots of 100 to 400 this year to do harvest work for a day or two at a time if the agricultural manpower shortage resulted in a real crisis in a camp area.

Chairman Fulmer (Democrat) of South Carolina of the House Agriculture Committee, said after returning from a conference with the Chief Executive that he would eliminate the farm furlough provision from a bill he has introduced covering the farm deferment problem.

As Commander in Chief, Chairman Fulmer pointed out, the President can use troops for harvesting without additional legislation.

Sees Other Congressmen

Other Congressmen with whom President Roosevelt conferred yesterday—presumably on the pressing farm labor situation—were Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama, Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida and Senator Murray (Democrat) of Montana.

Asked at his press conference whether he is worried over the contention by some that it is impossible to have 11 million in the armed forces and raise all the food needed this year, the President replied that he was of course concerned. And then he went on to relate how Moscow met a serious food and fuel problem last year by using 300,000 school children.

Belief Opposed

He expressed belief younger workers could help farmers very materially. This belief, however, is not held by many Congressmen. Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado and Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Oklahoma both yesterday declared the farm labor problem cannot be solved by school children.

Aside from farm manpower, which also was discussed yesterday at a closed meeting of the Economic Stabilization Board, the chief point of contention between the Administration and the strong congressional farm bloc is the price farmers are to receive for their products.

Delving into dairy and livestock prices, a Senate subcommittee was told by Deputy Price Administrator J. K. Galbraith that the directive freezing fluid milk prices at January levels would be modified to permit increases in some areas.

Galbraith said an order permitting increases in the Southeast is about ready for announcement and that studies are being made on the need for upward adjustments in southern California and at least five other areas.

The deputy administrator disagreed with committee members that increases in food prices would

Heavy Buying of Canned Goods Heralds Prerationing 'Freeze'

Heavy buying of canned goods by housewives was reported in many stores here yesterday in anticipation of the "freeze" order on processed fruits and vegetables effective at midnight tonight and because of the holiday Monday, Washington's Birthday.

At the same time it was announced that public eating places would begin March 1 to receive bi-monthly allotments of rationed foods.

Relating to the latter measure, OPA officials said that a person eating away from home would not be required to surrender individual coupons but in cases where he is eating in a certain hotel, restaurant or rooming house for seven days or more he will have to turn over his ration book to the operator of the establishment, who will in turn forward it to the individual's local ration board.

Inquiries made by The Post about the increase in purchases revealed, however, that most grocers had experienced nothing which indicated a feeling of panic among food purchasers. In a few isolated cases reports were made that runs had occurred on certain of the

Kursk-Kharkov Railway Cut; Battles Raging In Donets Basin

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Feb. 19.—The Russians declared today that the whole Donets Basin was alive with battles while the midnight communique said the Red army had cleared the Kursk-Kharkov railroad and had driven 12 miles west of Kharkov.

(A special Moscow communique recorded by the Soviet monitor said that Oboyan, 35 miles south of Kursk, was surrounded and its Nazi garrison either wiped out or taken prisoner. Thus "the Kursk-Kharkov railway and highroad have been completely cleared of the enemy," the communique said.

(On the Kursk front the regular midnight communique said that "the Germans hurriedly are rushing up tanks and reserves," but "our units continued to press back the enemy.

("It has been established in recent fighting that detachments of the 327th German Infantry which arrived a few days ago from Lyon (France) took part in this fighting."

(Lubotin, 12 miles west of Kharkov, and Merefa, 15 miles southwest of Kharkov, also fell to the Russians as they cleared out an entire north-south series of springboards to facilitate their push toward the Dnieper River, considered the next best German defensive line in southern Russia.

55 Miles From Poltava

(The capture of Lubotin put the Russian army only 55 miles from Poltava, another German base on the Lozovaya-Kiev railway across the Ukraine. Lubotin also is a junction for the line running to Sumy and Konotop to the northwest.

(The numerous Soviet columns operating west of Kursk and Kharkov now are in a position to spread out to the northwest and southwest over a vast network of Ukrainian railways leading to the Dnieper.

(The regular midnight communique reported that one Soviet unit striking west of Rostov had "crossed a water barrier, and after breaking down German resistance occupied an enemy fortified position."

(This water barrier may mean that the Russians have crossed a small river emptying into the Sea of Azov, only about 6 miles northwest of Taganrog.

(The German communique said renewed Russian attacks were repelled in the Kharkov area, south-

U. S. Supplies Sent To Russia Without Loss Last 2 Months

The United States has shipped more than 2,900,000 tons of war supplies to the Soviet Union, Lend-Lease Administrator Edward R. Stettinius, jr., reported yesterday, adding that two-thirds of all cargoes moved in American ships.

"The great majority of the supplies are reaching their destination," Stettinius said. "In December, 1942, and January, 1943, there were no losses, although further losses in later months are to be expected."

Shipments in January were almost 10 per cent greater than in the previous month and American tanks, planes and trucks "are continuing to go forward."

January food shipments were one-fifth greater than those in December.

Forces to Total 11 Million in '43, President Says

President Roosevelt said yesterday that it was decided last August how many men should go into the Army this year. The decision on the size of the Army, he emphasized, was dictated by military necessity. He said it called for 7½ million men, exclusive of officers, by next December 31.

With other services, it was brought out in an exchange of questions with reporters at his press conference, this would mean a total of 10,800,000 in all armed services.

(Manpower officials have indicated in recent statements that the total in all armed services would pass 11 million by the end of the year.)

As for 1944, the President said he had not the faintest idea of what size the armed forces should be. But he said he could look ahead to this autumn when new figures

President Sees Blow at Japs Based in China

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt said yesterday that China was to be the next important base of operations in the war with Japan, and he promised that planes and other weapons would be sent to China as fast as the Lord will let us send them.

It was a solemn pronouncement. A moment later, however, the President's office was reverberating with laughter, and Mr. Roosevelt himself looked like the man who forgot to duck.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, standing alongside the President at a joint press conference, commented on his reference to the Lord, and she reminded him and some 200 reporters that the Lord helps those who help themselves.

The President's eyebrows went up; then, with an expression that said "Touche," he joined in the hilarity.

The Chinese here, some of them veterans of China's five-year war with Japan, were tremendously impressed by what President Roosevelt said in connection with their homeland. He had come near to saying the same thing a week before at the White House Correspondents' dinner, but they felt that this was more concrete.

The occasion was an extraordinary one that saw the dainty wife

Gandhi's Doctor Sees Little Hope If Fast Continues

By William McGaffin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Poona, India, Feb. 19. Mohandas K. Gandhi grew steadily weaker today near the half-way mark in his fast against detention in the palace of the Aga Khan, and an attending physician declared it would "be a miracle" if the Indian leader survived the 21-day ordeal.

The large staff of doctors anxiously consulting over the 73-year-old Gandhi agreed that he was "weak—weaker than yesterday."

[Devandas Gandhi, eldest son of Nationalist Leader Mohandas K. Gandhi, left Bombay hurriedly for his father's bedside today as reports reached Bombay that the 73-year-old mahatma was "sinking," according to the International News Service.]

As Gandhi completed his tenth day on citrus juices and water, his doctors issued a statement asking his friends not to see him.

Gandhi's fast began February 10 in protest over the refusal of Viceroy Lord Linlithgow to give him his unconditional release.

Axis Crushed U. S. Division, Reporter Says

By Frederick Kuh
Copyright by Chicago Sun

London, Feb. 19.—This week's engagement in Tunisia cost the United States Army the larger part of one division in casualties, including killed, wounded and prisoners, and about 150 tanks, according to an estimate which I believe to be reliable.

Gen. Jurgen von Arnim is said to have lost "at least 20 tanks" and the Germans probably took severe punishment too, but nobody is inclined to conceal the American defeat.

Parts of five Axis divisions were thrown against the Americans—how large those parts were is unknown—but the enemy divisions appear to have been far below full strength.

They were numerically somewhat superior to us, but not very much.

The Germans evidently outsmarted us and instead of hiding this fact the people here are inclined to draw a valuable lesson from it.

What were the Nazi tactics?

Our troops were dispersed over a long front, extending perhaps for 70 miles. Our tanks, however, were bunched in groups at various points.

British Labor Party Refuses Again to Join Communists

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Feb. 20.—British Labor Party once more has delivered an emphatic "no" to the Communist Party's request for affiliation.

In a 1500-word pamphlet circulated today to the press, along with a five-page reproduction of the constitution and rules of the Communist International, the Laborites argued that the communists could not work with the labor movement because they owed "primary loyalty" to the Communist International.

They said that if the affiliation were permitted, the Labor Party would become "an organization of conflicting, warring atoms entirely devoid of that basis of unity which is fundamental to any great political party."

The pamphlet said communists had done "political somersaulting of the most contemptible kind" between the beginning of the war and the German invasion of Russia."

They were declared to have "seized every opportunity for creating dissatisfaction and defeatism" when the whole world believed Britain to be down and out.

Ray of Light

Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Feb. 19 (AP).—American armored forces stabilized their new line on the Tunisian mountains near the Algerian frontier today while the violent drive by Marshal Erwin Rommel that had carried him more than 60 miles slacked off to mere skirmishing.

The announced withdrawal of French troops from Pichon, about 40 miles north of the Faid Pass area where Rommel began his thrust on Sunday, indicated that the central section of the Allied front was being moved back to stronger defensive positions on the west side of the Ousseltia Valley. This would deprive Rommel of opportunity for a quick thrust northwest behind the Allied forward units.

The new line runs along mountains as high as 4000 feet which flank the pass leading from Feriana to Tebessa, the latter in Algeria.

Rommel was assumed to have suspended his drive toward the Algerian plateau in part because of the threat being offered by the British Eighth army of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery which, moving up from southeastern Tunisia, was disclosed during the day to have captured Foum Tatahouine on the Matmata range along the southern flank of the Mareth line.

Dispatches from Cairo indicated that this point had fallen without much fighting. Thirty miles to the north, however, more enemy resistance was being encountered; Montgomery's artillery batteries were exchanging fire with the Germans in the Medenine outpost of the Mareth line. It was believed that a heavy attack on Rommel was coming very soon.

The Allied communique reported no action of consequence during the day. The French high command, speaking of an action well to the north of the Feriana area, announced that French Moroccan troops southwest of Pont Du Fahs had taken 45 Axis prisoners in a local attack and that in another and unsuspected northern Tunisian sector British and French troops had "inflicted serious losses on the enemy and captured prisoners and arms."

A later supplemental French communique said "our Moroccan mounted troops, with the fierceness which is characteristic of them,

Germans Losing War in Tunisia, Gen. Devers Says

Detroit, Feb. 19 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers said today that because American and German tank losses in Tunisian fighting were about equal, the Germans are losing the war there.

Devers said: "The Germans would have to knock out five of our tanks to the loss of one to be winning the offensive."

Devers said the Americans have the best projectile yet devised, explaining, "it's a shell that will penetrate 4 inches of armor plate and burst inside of a tank."

"We have taught our boys to open up tank fire from 3000 yards—an unusual distance," the general said. "They catch the Germans by surprise. The Germans will have a lot more surprises before long."

U.S. Troops Anxious To Return Blow

Our Troops Undaunted After Absorbing Enemy's 'Sunday Punch' in Tunisia

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

With United States Forces in Tunisia, Feb. 17 (Delayed).—Jerry threw his Sunday punch at us with men, guns and tanks and that, in part, is the story of the American retreat in Tunisia.

The bloody battlefields, littered with broken vehicles and marked with the cross of Germany as well as the star of America, testify that the Nazis had no margin in courage.

Out into the long valley and into the hills they marched and rolled on wheels—thousands of American soldiers fighting mad because they had to march backward toward New York instead of forward toward Tunis and Sfax.

To the Germans it was a retreat. To the Americans it was a strategic withdrawal. But whatever name it's called it had just one effect on the American soldiers and that was to get back at the Germans with all they have just as soon as the commanders give the word.

No Alternative

As one who watched for three straight days as American tankmen threw away their lives in a gamble to stem the onward avalanche of the German armored force, I for one, couldn't question the decision to withdraw.

That's why German patrols roam the plains of the Sbeitla-Feriana Valley tonight and the sleepless French and American guards watch from the walls overlooking the yellow acres dotted with blossoming almond trees, green olive groves and spikey cactus.

As one who has slept and eaten in the field for almost two months of steadily more successful operations with every branch of the American Army, I had my first opportunity to see how they reacted when the going really got tough.

Well, here's the way one infantryman summed it up after plodding 15 miles cross-country at night:

"That means it will take us another week or more now to win the war. But every week I have spent away from the United States because of those kraut hounds makes me just that much sorer at them."

The withdrawal was orderely and without any signs of panic.

It began two nights ago and continued as American tank, artillery and infantry forces held the Germans from a major breakthrough. These outfits then withdrew themselves, still engaging the enemy.

The removal at Sbeitla went on as scheduled, despite the fact that German artillery shelled the town during the night and their tanks made a futile two-hour push beginning at 2 a. m. to seize the town under cover of darkness. By dawn they still had a fight on their hands before entering.

Planes Make Getaway

All Allied planes at Thelepte Airfield, long a sore spot to the German ground forces as well as to Nazi fliers, were safely flown away and the French and American forces stationed at nearby Feriana marched into the adjoining hills without hurry, leaving a company of light tanks to guard the rear.

French pack trains wound slowly across the plains, the mules and men loaded with equipment. As one French private, bent almost double under his pack, passed a group of American officers he straightened up, saluted smartly, and gave them a greeting with the only words of English he knew:

"Okay, hallo keed!"

Last to come out was a company of light tanks, with their guns still warm from a successful delaying engagement with a German armored column.

As the plucky little tanks rolled up the mountain through falling snow several French soldiers saved by their stand cheered and shouted at them. Smiling tankmen waved back.

The fingers of every soldier were parted in the "V" signal for victory.

Son of Fort Myer Commander Is Killed in European Theater

LIEUTENANT SMITH

Lieut. Sullivan

Sergt. Kisseleff

First Lieut. Maxwell W. Sullivan, 24-year-old bomber pilot and son of the commanding officer of Fort Myer, has been killed in action in the European theater, it was learned yesterday after the War Department released its latest casualty list.

The list, which also reported Staff Sergt. Jerome C. Kisseleff, 22, and Pvt. Ralph P. Athias, Roanoke, Va., as missing, placed Lieutenant Sullivan in the same category, but the flier's father, Col. Max W. Sullivan, told The Post he was notified February 16—after the preparation but prior to the release of the official list—of his son's death.

The list includes 93 soldiers who, excluding Lieutenant Sullivan, are missing in the European, North African, South Pacific and Southwest Pacific areas.

Born in New Jersey

A native of Inglewood, N. J., Lieutenant Sullivan received his education at many points where his father was stationed during an extensive Army career dating from graduation from West Point in 1912. At one time Lieutenant Sullivan was a student at E. V. Brown Junior High School here. In 1941 he was graduated from West Point. He transferred from the Infantry to the Air Corps in March, 1942, and, after receiving training as a bomber pilot, left for overseas in October.

Colonel Sullivan said he had received several letters from his son describing his repeated and intensive bombing excursions over the continent. Colonel and Mrs. Sullivan live with their second son, Albert, 13, at Fort Myer.

Arlington Native

Sergeant Kisseleff, a native of Arlington County and a graduate of Washington-Lee High School, enlisted in the Army Air Corps about 15 months ago, according to his father, Morris Kisseleff, 2601 Lee Highway, who said that his son served as a mechanical engineer. His family has not heard from him since January 18 and was notified by the War Department three weeks ago that Jerome was missing in action over Europe.

Two of his brothers, Irving and Lyman, are in the Air Corps.

The latest Navy Department casualty list, also released yesterday, reported that Pvt. James G. Garrison, 18, U. S. M. C., the son of Mrs. Elsie V. Garrison, who lives with her daughter, Mrs. Paul Snarr, and her youngest son, Ronald, at 2014 C Street Northeast, has been wounded. His brother, Cecil, is serving with the Army overseas and another sister, Mrs. Kenneth McKenney, makes her residence at 4630 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest.

Pvt. Garrison

Private Garrison is a native of Washington and was graduated from Macfarland Junior High School. He enlisted in the Marines one year ago. About two weeks ago his family here received a letter from him which failed to mention any injury.

The Navy list brings the total of naval losses since Pearl Harbor to 23,432, including 6617 dead, 12,365 missing and 4450 wounded.

Silver Spring Flier Is Killed in Action

Lieut. Robert Howard Smith, U. S. Army Air Corps, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. Smith, 1803 Grace Church Road, Silver Spring, Md., has been killed in action in Africa, it was learned yesterday.

The War Department notified Smith's parents by telegram Wednesday night. The message stated Lieutenant Smith was "killed in the defense of his country" February 2.

Lieutenant Smith was cited for knocking down a Junkers plane in a raid on an American airport, January 15.

Sailing for overseas October 24, 1942 on his twenty-fourth birthday, Lieutenant Smith enlisted in the Army in his junior year at the University of Maryland.

Besides his parents he leaves two brothers, Paul Smith who has just graduated from the University of Maryland and has enlisted in naval aviation, also Philip Smith, employed by the Bethlehem Ship Co., and three sisters, Mrs. Austin Kuehne, Mrs. John MacCubbin, both of Baltimore, and Joan Smith of Silver Spring.

'Handful' of Yanks Faced Axis Push

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 19.—Col. Edson Raff disclosed today that German gains this week in Central Tunisia were made in part of an area of 10,000 square miles which a handful of American soldiers and some Allied units had held for more than two months by sheer dash and bluff instead of numbers.

Head of the United States parachute formation which made a 1500-mile flight from England to the Oran area to participate in the A. E. A. occupation of French North Africa November 8, Colonel Raff has just returned to London.

He told a press conference that his untried parachutists teamed with a few British engineers, one small American anti-tank unit and poorly armed French troops to wage a free-wheeling warfare against the Germans.

Colonel Raff said the enemy apparently had never learned what little real strength held them out of the great triangle between Tebessa, Algeria, Faid and Tozeur.

(This dispatch, which passed through censorship, did not state the actual number of men in the Allied command, but the implication is that they were outnumbered throughout. A dispatch from Allied headquarters yesterday said the Germans had regained about 4000 square miles in their four-day drive.)

After the group held Gafsa a short time, there were indications the Germans were moving against it in force, Raff said, and he ordered a withdrawal. But the enemy's strength proved to be less than was expected, so a task force returned the next day and mopped up the few Germans who had pushed into Gafsa.

Informed that a tank column was headed toward Gafsa from Gabes, the Americans went out to meet them and learned on the way that another tank column was striking from Sbeitla, trying to cut off Gafsa.

The Americans met the enemy force from Gabes and knocked out six tanks and drove back the others. Then they made a quick reversal of the field to intercept the second German column. They knocked out eight planes and sent these Nazis also into retreat.

Then came a period of fantastic warfare when the little Allied force would strike out swiftly at some point to drive the Germans out and then turn the place over to French infantry. The Allied force would then move swiftly back to base or try another attack so the enemy could never learn where they were or how strong they were.

Using this device, they saw plenty of Tunisian scenery and managed to clean out their big triangle.

The Axis employed gliders considerably for sabotage missions at night, manning the sail planes with bold and able troops. A typically daring party of eight accomplished a mission near Gafsa and then, instead of striking out across the country back to their own lines, took the highway to Gafsa.

Challenged at the gates of the town by a Moroccan sentry, they said they were Americans. Their accent didn't suit the sentry so he fired, killing one and scattering the rest, who escaped.

made a successful attack in a valley west of Kebir" and took 50 prisoners, including officers.

In connection with their "voluntary withdrawal" from Gafsa last Tuesday, the French high command disclosed "our troops at the same time received an order to establish liaison with the Allies on a general line on dominating heights west of Ousseltia, Sbeitla, Kasserine and Feriana." The communique said French troops are now installed in these new positions.

In southern Tunisia, this communique continued, "operations are related to the approaching arrival of the British Eighth Army."

Losses Scaled Downward

Additional information from the front indicated that earlier estimates of American equipment losses in the heavy fighting now ended might be reduced as much as a third. For example, it developed that one unit of American tanks previously lost had in fact fought its way back.

(The Fighting French announced in London that an entire Fighting French division which had been with Montgomery's British Eighth Army had gone under the command of General Eisenhower, presumably having entered Tunisia from southern Libya.

Eighth Army Assault Reported

(The German radio reported that Axis troops had withdrawn from the mountain area near the southern end of the Mareth Line, perhaps indicating that no all-out resistance was planned in that area. The Nazis said Montgomery was attacking with both artillery and strong infantry forces.)

Officers here stressed the gallant struggle offered in the earlier heavy fighting by the inexperienced Americans and poorly equipped French on what was a long and thinly defended front.

The enemy's losses in equipment had not yet been determined, but the destruction of 20 German tanks by one American combat command and the exploit of another American detachment in knocking out six Nazi Mark VI tanks indicated it was by no means a German walk-over.

It was disclosed that Rommel's initial blow last Sunday from Faid Pass was viewed by General Eisenhower himself. He drove forward in a jeep from Sbeitla and came within range of a fierce artillery duel between German and American guns. He left a small village on the Sbeitla-Fair Pass road only a few hours before the Germans occupied it.

The admittedly heavy losses in American men and armor were believed here to mean that the British Eighth Army for the time being would assume the main burden of driving the Axis forces out of southern Tunisia.

(The Italian communique claimed an aggregate of 2,876 Allied prisoners taken in recent actions; the capture or destruction of 169 Allied tanks, 95 armored cars, 36 motor-transported guns, 66 other guns, 6 planes and a large number of trucks.)

"Inexperience" was the most widely heard reason for the American defeat in the first major test against combined formations from Rommel's Twenty-first Panzer Division, which fought in Libya, and the Tenth Panzer Division, which was engaged in Poland and France.

The Germans were reported to have used the tactic of sending several tanks near an American concentration and inducing a much heavier force out to attack. This heavier force was then drawn into artillery ambush.

It was estimated that American and French troops were holding two-thirds of the total Allied line in Tunisia when Rommel began his attack. The British held the remaining third in the north near Tunis and Bizerte, where the major portion of Axis General von Arnim's strength is believed stationed.

Without large reserves behind them the Americans faced the dilemma of risking a major breakthrough by Rommel or falling back to more tenable positions. Although suffering severely the Americans accomplished the withdrawal in good order.

Eighth Army Gains

London, Feb. 19 (AP).—A Reuters correspondent with the British Eighth Army at Ben Gardane, near the Mareth Line in southern Tunisia reported tonight that the British troops had cleared out Axis forces from Djerba Island in the Gulf of Gabes.

The 20-mile-long level and fertile island is in the curve of the southeastern Tunisian coast line just above the Axis-held Mareth Line.

tanks and artillery positions. Their tanks, believed to include the new 60-ton German Mark IV's, rushed forward after the dive-bombing attacks and overran our tanks, some of which fell into enemy hands intact. They also overran our advanced batteries.

They went right through an excellent American division with little opposition. Their dive-bombers raised hell. That happened after the enemy resumed attack on Wednesday.

The Axis push was clearly intended to forestall an overdue Allied offensive. It may have upset our timetable and reports from North Africa today state that we may have to repattern our planned offensive and review the disposition of our Army in southern Tunisia.

General von Arnim apparently is still mustering fresh forces for a diversion on a bigger scale than this week's attack. It is believed that this week's twin attack in the direction of Sbeitla and beyond Gafsa was the prelude to a new enemy push.

The Whys and Hows of Rationing

WHY—War time demands for leather and manpower have slowed down the production of civilian shoes to a point where rationing must be introduced to insure everyone in America will have enough shoes.

WHEN—Beginning February 9, 1943, ALL shoes and hard sole moccasin slippers (except infants' shoes) are rationed REGARDLESS OF PRICE, MAKE, GRADE OR QUALITY.

HOW—Stamp 17 from War Ration Book One entitles a consumer to buy one pair of shoes during the period beginning February 9 and ending June 15, 1943. Such Stamps may be used by any member of a family living in same household. A family of five is entitled to purchase five pairs of shoes during the period, but if advisable all five pairs could be purchased for one member.

* Members of the armed forces must present either Stamp 17 from War Ration Book 1, or secure Shoe Purchase Certificate from their Commanding Officer.

Block-Buster Gifts

Bombs Rain On German U-Boat Base

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 19.—The R. A. F. delivered a heavy cargo of block-busters on the Wilhelmshaven U-boat base and shipyards last night while other British squadrons shot up shipping along the Dutch and French coasts and inland communications across France and Belgium.

The Wilhelmshaven raid was a repeat performance of the heavy assault a week earlier and the seventy-second of the war on the sprawling port which has produced a great number of Atlantic raiders.

Four bombers were lost.

The Germans conceded casualties were suffered "particularly in the surrounding localities" and claimed nine planes were downed.

Fast, cannon-carrying fighters and fighter-bombers, including the new Typhoons, Beaufighters and Whirlwinds, were among the strong intruder squadrons that bombed railways and shipping in the Dunkerque area and hit a convoy between Calais and Cap Gris Nez, where results were difficult to observe.

Two fighters and a coastal command plane failed to return from coastal attacks.

The Air Ministry said Ventura bombers, with a fighter escort, attacked the docks at Den Helder in Holland this afternoon and started large fires. One of the fighter planes failed to return.

Slight enemy activity over the west coast of England this afternoon was reported in a communique issued by the Ministries of Air and Home Security, which said no bombs were dropped.

Bloody Fighting Now in Progress North of Shanghai

By the Associated Press

Chungking, Feb. 19.—A Chinese High Command communique said today that all the Japanese drives in central, southern and southwestern China had been slowed down or thrown into reverse, although costly fighting continued in some areas.

Bloody battles were being fought in northern Kiangsu Province, north of Shanghai, as the Japanese tried to compress a 45-mile semi-circular line running through the lake country from Paoying to Fowning near the sea. The Chinese said all the Japanese thrusts had been halted.

Grows in Intensity

The fighting in western Yunnan, where the Japanese were trying to extend their grip along the Burma Road and were moving in several columns west of the Salween River, also was growing more intense. But one column which moved up to the Salween withdrew after an artillery exchange across the stream, and there was no change in positions north of Tengyueh, also on the west side of the river.

In Hupeh Province in central China, where the Japanese were attempting new expeditions from their Ichang and Shasi bases on the Yangtze, the Chinese said they were in pursuit of one column after killing 400 of the invaders. Another enemy column which set out to the south from the Yangtze port of Hosueh was unable to make any progress.

In Kiangsi Province, south of the river, the Japanese were declared to have lost most of the force which took Fengsin and attacked Kaoan.

Japanese troops which had landed on the Luichow Peninsula in the southern province of Kwangtung also had made no progress despite the support of planes.

Some speculation on the widespread activity suggested today that the Japanese were looking for a sugar coating for the pill they were forced by the Americans to swallow at Guadalcanal in the Solomons.

The Communist New China Daily News said the Japanese were trying to spread the idea that President Roosevelt's promise of a big offensive against Japan was only a "paper tiger."

Military quarters said the Japanese radio threat, yesterday to crush Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's armies may be only a feint for action elsewhere.

Those persons who took the threat seriously mentioned an Allied decision at Casablanca to smash Hitler first. The Japanese, believing their armies will not be needed elsewhere this year, may have decided to use them in China, these observers said.

Spiritual Weapon Strongest

Chungking, Feb. 18 (Delayed) (AP).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek said in a broadcast tonight that the main purpose of China's New Life Movement, initiated in 1934, was to prepare the nation for the task of resisting aggression.

Declaring that China's most powerful weapon in the war, now nearly six years old, was "the spiritual weapon," Chiang Kai-shek said that recently concluded treaties with the United States and Britain made it more necessary than ever for the nation to "reform a corrupt way of living in order that we may become newly equal to advanced nations."

He referred to treaties in which the United States and Britain discarded extraterritorial rights in China.

east of Orel and on the Donets Front. Continued attempts to pierce the Nazi line south of Lake Ladoga, near Leningrad and southeast of Lake Ilmen also were reported repelled. A break in weather was said by the Germans to have limited fighting around Novorossisk to local engagements.)

The capture of Zalegoshch had placed the Russians only 30 miles east of Orel, a main German bastion.

At Orel the German General Gamman has a large garrison, relatively inactive for many months, which should be in the best condition and well equipped.

In the Donets Basin, Pravda reported, the Red Army is constantly cutting behind German lines, disrupting their few remaining communications and exposing their flanks. The News Agency Tass said fierce day engagements were being followed by rapid night marches and surprise attacks.

"The Germans are constantly launching counterattacks," Tass said. "However, all their attempts to check our progress have achieved nothing. At the approaches of one important Hitlerite center of resistance, guardsmen killed more than 800 Germans. The Donets Basin is scorched by war and devastated by the Fascists."

Front dispatches said the Germans were in great panic leaving Kharkov when the first thunder of Russian artillery echoed through the streets. Many officers had their families with them and they quickly organized escape trains.

President Sees Jap Blow Based on China

of Generalissimo Chiag Kai-shek establishing another precedent in her memorable visit to Washington.

When the curtain went up on this particular White House press conference, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek was seated in President Roosevelt's big swivel chair, her feet dangling several inches from the floor. The chair, along with two others, had been moved back near the window. The President sat on one side of his famous guest, and Mrs. Roosevelt in the other.

Mrs. Roosevelt, attired in a new red dress, was concerned lest little Mme. Chiang should fall back in the swivel chair. She kept her hand on an arm of the chair throughout the conference.

President Roosevelt started out by presenting the press to Mme. Chiang. He noted that, after 10 years in the White House, he and the reporters were still on speaking terms, and he thought that was a good sign.

He asked the reporters to put "non-catch" questions to Mme. Chiang, and he said that the usual rule would apply—that nothing that was said could be quoted. Later, however, his preliminary remarks, as well as those of China's First Lady, were released for quotation.

Compliments Reporters

Mme. Chiang—she later explained that her name was pronounced "Jeeahng"—paid the American press a nice compliment. She had noted, she said, that while President Roosevelt was in Casablanca, not a word was said about it in the newspapers. She congratulated the newspapermen on their tact and integrity, and the blushing scribes burst in applause.

In answer to a question, she said she came to the United States for her health. Was there any chance that she might stay here and act as a liaison between the White House and Congress? No, she was pretty sure that the President was in no need of a liaison.

"What does China need?" a reporter asked.

The President broke in and said he could answer that himself. He said that China needed planes and munitions of all kinds, and Mme. Chiang said that this was right. There was plenty of manpower, she said, but the Chinese could not fight the Japs with bare hands.

The American pilots—the Flying Tigers — had greatly heartened China, Mme. Chiang said, not only because they had prevented the Japs from bombing cities like Chungking, but because their presence made the Chinese feel that America was their ally—that they were not fighting alone.

China herself had many pilots, she said, but they lacked planes and the gasoline to fly planes. However, she said, President Roosevelt had solved so many problems, had come through so many crises with flying colors, that China felt it could safely depend on him now.

Difficulties Cited

She flashed the smile that had captivated Congress the day before.

Yes, the President said, Mme. Chiang was 100 per cent right. The United States was just as eager to knock out Japan as China was. But a look at the map, he said, would show some of the difficulties. Planes could be flown into China from the southwest, but these planes not only had to carry enough gasoline to get them to China but enough to get them out. At the same time, they had to leave something in China.

No problem, he said, had been studied harder than this one of supplying China.

As for the grand strategy of attacking Japan, he repeated that it was not enough to approach her island-by-island. If one island were taken every month, he said, it would take 50 years to reach the enemy's homeland.

He then said that China was going to become the next important base of operations against Japan. This, he said, was a definite policy, one to which everybody in Washington was pledged.

He went on to say that if he were a member of the Chinese government, he would want to know when all this was going to happen. The answer was, he said, just as fast as the Lord will let us.

That paved the way for Mme. Chiang's thrust about the Lord helping those who help themselves. The reporters went away feeling that the man who once said she was worth 10 army divisions to China was a piker.

Wave of Fear Sweeping Axis Satellites

By Edwin Shanke
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, Feb. 19.—A wave of defeatism and fears for the future appeared today to be gripping Nazi satellites and Quislings as the Soviet offensive continued to roll back Adolf Hitler's eastern armies.

The defeatist current in Rumania was reported in Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter, which added that Marshal Ion Antonescu, the Rumanian leader, was fighting it by throwing ringleaders into concentration camps.

In Austria four more workers were hanged for "high treason" principally in connection with anti-Hitler leaflets advocating the laying down of arms, independent Austrian sources said. This brings to 93 the number of executions by the Gestapo published in the Austrian press since last November 1.

Critical talk about the German war leadership and expressions "hostile to the Germans" so predominate the protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia that Marshal Hermann Goering's Essener National Zeitung attacked the Czechs for it and demanded that they "abandon the double game."

Hungarians Depressed

Heavy Hungarian losses at the east front have had a "very depressing" effect on the broad mass of the people, who never were enthusiastic about the war and felt it "senseless," reliable sources said. Now the press is beginning to reflect defeatist tendencies among the people and shaken confidence in hopes for victory.

The government newspaper, Pester Lloyd, for example, in discussing the attack on Hungary which appeared in the Russian army newspaper Red Star, asked anxiously: "Will Hungary be treated worse than Rumania?"

The Catholic newspaper Nemzeti Ujsag noted that the war doesn't bring victories alone, but losses and defeats, too, "which one must bravely face and hope for the future."

Other newspapers for the first time since the start of the war declare, "No matter how the war comes out," Hungary must be prepared to live on good terms with her neighbors because "the existence of Hungarianism depends on it."

Grievous losses coupled with growing economic difficulties increasingly caused talk about Hungary's need for getting out of the war as soon as possible, some sources said.

Finns Are Speaking Out

The Finns also are beginning to speak openly of their right to make peace in their own interests at the proper time. A Social Democratic Party manifesto just before the recent presidential election bluntly said so. This manifesto also demanded better relations with the United States, the only major country at war with Germany and at the same time at peace with Finland.

Stockholm's Tidningen said there were many signs of Finnish opposition rapidly widening to take the initiative in leading the Finns out of the fighting lines.

Quislings in Norway, fearing the "Germans may be forced to withdraw," are beginning to run for cover, Norwegian reports said.

German reverses caused near panic among many Quislings who have grown wealthy by working for the Nazi occupation authorities, the Swedish News Bureau said. They are now endeavoring to cover up the ownership of properties and securities so they won't be confiscated when Norway is freed.

Meanwhile, a German newspaper in Belgium, Bruesseler Zeitung, violently attacked the Dutch who are showing their confidence in an Allied victory by speculating in stock which is worthless at present because the country's gold capital is outside the Netherlands.

These investments are "contrary to the general interests," the newspaper complained.

D. C. Man Helps

Wounded Bombardier Bests Nazis

By Gladwin Hill
Associated Press Staff Writer

United States Bomber Station in England, Feb. 19.—The boys are talking with unusual admiration about Lieut. Claude Galloway of Venice, Calif., a Flying Fortress bombardier, who, though seriously wounded in a raid on France, had a fellow crewman load his gun and kept firing it one-handed until attacking German fighters were driven away.

Galloway was at the navigator's table in the nose of "Expendable No. 2," piloted by Lieut. Harold O'Neill of Graceville, Minn., during a heavy head-on attack by Nazi fighters in Tuesday's raid on St. Nazaire.

His companion in the nose, Navigator Lieut. Peter Branch of Manchester, N. H., and Washington, D. C., had just gotten two enemy fighters when a 20-millimeter shell from another knocked an 18-inch hole in the nose and exploded inside the plane, wounding Galloway so severely in the back that he could not move his left arm.

Shell fragments hit two oxygen tanks and started a fire. Co-Pilot Lieut. Warren Collins of Burlington, Vt., reached down from the cockpit and with an extinguisher helped Branch put out the blaze.

Galloway pulled himself into a half-sitting position on the floor, asked Branch to load his gun for him and started firing again.

"He kept right at it, even though a steady stream of hot clips from our shells were pouring down on his face," Branch said. "It was as brave as anything I ever saw."

When the Germans shifted their attack to the tail of the Fortress, Branch found a hole as big as his thumb in Galloway's back, with a 4-inch splinter extending from it.

"I tried to give him morphine to ease the shock, but the morphine tube was frozen," Branch recounted. "I had it in my mouth 20 minutes trying to get it thawed out.

"But I didn't do anything. It was Galloway. Those Focke-Wulfs? Oh, I couldn't have missed those. They were coming straight on."

Galloway was reported doing well in the hospital and was expected to recover soon.

Branch Went to G. W.

Lieutenant Branch is the son of Raymond Branch of 1735 Twentieth Street Northwest, an attorney with the Federal Trade Commission. He attended Western High School and George Washington University. He joined the Royal Canadian Air Force in 1940, returning to the United States shortly before Christmas of that year to join the American Army. Lieutenant Branch was awarded the Air Medal in London January 24 for "exceptionally meritorious service on U. S. A. A. F. bombing planes.

Truck Speed May Be Raised For War Goods

By the Associated Press

Modification of the national 35-mile-an-hour speed limit to permit trucks to rush "emergency" war-vital freight is probable soon, informed sources reported yesterday. The plan was proposed by the War Department, and Rubber Director William M. Jeffers was declared willing to give it a 60-day test.

Principal responsibility for preventing abuses would rest with truck operators, who would be given an "emergency pennant" for any truck operating above the 35-mile limit. After each flying of the pennant, the operator would be required to give ODT a full explanation of the shipment.

Hopkins, Byrnes, Rosenman Urge Roosevelt to Oust Nelson

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Whether Donald M. Nelson stays on as chairman of the War Production Board was said to be up to President Roosevelt yesterday, with three special presidential advisers—James F. Byrnes, Harry Hopkins and Judge Samuel I. Rosenman—siding with the armed forces in urging his ouster.

Nelson, who acted to end dissension within the War Production Board earlier this week by discharging Ferdinand Eberstadt, WPB vice chairman, regarded as the champion of the armed forces, was said to be in danger of ouster himself because of the powerful opposition which has developed in favor of a candidate friendly to the service.

There were some indications, however, that Nelson might be given a reprieve to demonstrate his ability to perform effectively with the new Eberstadt-less WPB setup.

By securing the support of Byrnes, the economic stabilization director; Hopkins, a presidential friend of long standing who is now handling lend-lease matters, and Rosenman, the man who generally does the legal drafting attendant upon governmental reorganizations, the armed services received three powerful allies who may be able to sway the President, it was said.

Friends of Nelson lament that the WPB chief allowed himself to be outmaneuvered by the armed forces by failing to combat actively their campaign against him. The White House was said to have given at least tacit approval to the ouster of Eberstadt earlier this week, but Nelson's position has steadily deteriorated since then, without any action on his part to combat it.

Nelson was said to have taken the stand he did because the White House let it be known that the President was tired of reading about intra-governmental squabbles in the newspapers. It was said that for this reason Nelson canceled a press conference that he was slated to hold on Thursday.

'42 Canned Salmon Released to Public

Salmon canners were authorized yesterday to release to wholesalers for civilian consumption about 50 million pounds of salmon, but consumers will be unable to buy it until the present freeze on canned fish is ended.

The salmon released yesterday is the remaining 20 per cent of the 1942 pack, which last year was frozen to insure that sufficient stocks would be available for the armed forces. Sixty per cent has been purchased for military use and United Nations shipment, and 20 per cent was released to civilians earlier.

Court Clears Hecht Co. In OPA Case

The Hecht Co. was absolved by Justice F. Dickinson Letts in District Court yesterday of all charges that it had wilfully violated price ceiling, price recording and price posting regulations of the Office of Price Administration.

The decision climaxed lengthy hearings before Justice Letts brought by the OPA, which sought an injunction to restrain the store from any possible future violations of the price ceiling regulations.

The attitude of the Hecht Co. was described in the court decision as "not antagonistic but cooperative, and in my judgment an injunction would not be in the public interest."

Furthermore, the justice stated, Congress had never expected 100 per cent compliance with the regulations when it passed the restrictive measure.

Officials of the OPA announced immediately that they would file an appeal with the United States Court of Appeals and at the same time emphasized their determination to prosecute a similar suit against Woodward & Lothrop, scheduled to be heard in District Court beginning March 1.

Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president of the Hecht Co., termed the decision a vindication of the entire retail industry and explained the store's position as a result of the decision as being, "not a triumph or victory, but rather a vindication of our position."

Highlights of the decision are:

The requirements of the act and regulation are recent. The defendant company found it necessary to learn and understand the requirements of the act and the regulation and to plan and organize for compliance from and after the effective date. The opportunity to so prepare was meager and the time allowed for compliance was brief.

Violations occurred but I do not consider them numerous in view of the difficulties involved in defendant's efforts to comply with the act and regulation. The defendant company is a large retail establishment organized in 75 departments under the direct supervision of buyers and merchandise managers; its volume of business is approximately 20 million dollars per year; its employes range in number between 1900 and 2000; its inventory of January 30, 1942 showed an excess of 1,200,000 items of merchandise; it had between January 1, 1942 and November 1, 1942 some 54,030 transactions; a transaction includes any number of items brought by a customer at the time of the transaction.

The defendant took timely, positive and vigorous measures to understand the requirements and to meet them. It set up a capable organization with an unlimited expense account, charged with the duty of directing and supervising the personnel in an honest and sincere effort to comply in full measure with the requirements of the act and regulation.

No Disloyal Motive

Certain it is that violations occurred, but I do not find that the defendant company is chargeable with bad faith or of disloyal motive or purpose. It is not charged that the defendant was willful in its violations and I think it appropriate to say that the element of willfulness is entirely lacking in the evidence.

There is little if any disagreement as to the facts. I think the requirements as applied to the conduct of defendant's business were somewhat complicated. The defendant company made prompt and reasonable efforts to meet the requirements, and yet violations occurred. As I view the evidence such violations were the result of errors in interpreting the act and the regulation and in applying same to the transactions of the defendant company. Some of the violations may have resulted from negligence or carelessness but I find them innocent in character.

No inference of intentional wrongdoing may be drawn from them. It may be said to the credit of the defendant company that all errors and mistakes were promptly corrected as soon as they were discovered. It should also be added that the defendant has consistently improved its methods and its records to more fully meet the requirements of the act and regulation and to combat the difficulties which arise from the elements of human frailty.

War Measure

I am sure that Congress did not anticipate 100 per cent compliance. The act is a war measure and Congress rightfully expected conscientious and thoughtful cooperation of loyal citizens. Punishment is provided for willful violations, but where violations are not accompanied by the element of willfulness the Price Administrator may ask and have the powers of the court as an aid in his administration of the act.

If in such circumstances an injunction is asked, the court is not deprived of its inherent powers by calling it a statutory injunction. The court in such case retains its implied powers, exercised in a sound discretion. Judicial discretion in such case does not mean judicial duty, as the Price Administrator contends. A court of equity may not be divested of jurisdiction by implication. The general equity powers of a court remain unimpaired except where a statute is so rigid as to inhibit the application of equitable doctrines. As generally understood, judicial discretion includes the propriety of granting appropriate relief. All rules in equity must necessarily be sufficiently elastic to do justice in the case under consideration. Courts of equity are not inquisitorial but remedial.

Matter of Fact

In support of an application for statutory injunction it is not necessary to show that irreparable injury will result nor is it necessary to negative an adequate remedy at law. In other respects each case must be determined upon its facts and on equitable principles. In a case such as this an injunction should not issue unless thereby better compliance with law may be enforced. Such consideration is addressed to the sound discretion of the court. In such case, where violations of law were not flagrant and occurred despite reasonable effort to comply with the law the court should consider upon the facts of a particular case whether there is reason to anticipate further violations.

In the legislation here involved it was not the purpose of Congress to police industry but to seek compliance for the public good and to recognize honest and true efforts to meet the requirements of the law. It is elementary that the purpose of an injunction is ot deter rather than to punish. In the circumstances of this case I do not find that there is reason to apprehend future violations of the act and regulation. The attitude of the defendant company is not antagonistic but cooperstive, and in my judgment an injunction would not be in the public interest. There is manifestation of good faith by the defendant, and I find no likelihood of further violation by it. I conclude that a just result requires a dismissal of plaintiff's complaint. There is abundant support in the authorities for the view which I have taken of the law which controls the case."

Counsel for defendant will submit for settlement appropriate findings and a suitable form for final order.

lead to an increase in production, and declared he believed strongly in the theory of incentive payments to farmers.

He said provision for subsidy payments is written into the law under which OPA operates and declared, "It is not the intention of OPA to fix prices below the level that will permit a fair and equitable return above the cost of production.

Cites Inflation Fear

"If prices are raised in one place they have to be raised all around the board. I don't believe you can increase production like that, but I do believe you can get a bang-up inflation that way," he declared.

Food prices already are high enough to permit farmers to stay in business, he declared, asserting his agency has found no conclusive evidence to show dairy herds are being slaughtered because dairymen cannot make expenses. Most farm prices, he said, are now well above parity levels.

Marvin Jones, agricultural adviser to the Economic Stabilization Board, told the committee that the OPA had not been directed to hold down prices "without any consideration to the cost of production."

Roy Hendrickson, director of the Food Distribution Administration, produced statistics to show that the number of milch cows in the country is greater than it was a year ago and said the Farm Security Administration was ready to purchase cows for resale from farmers wishing to quit dairying. He said he saw no trend in that direction and that only 1500 cows had been "replaced" since the buying for replacement went into effect.

L. Clifford Kenworthy, California dairyman and hog raiser, said he made more money out of 500 hogs raised by one man last year than out of 900 dairy cows tended by 40. Under the recent price freeze for milk, he said, "I cannot continue to be a dairyman."

House Near Revolt On Farm Program

mittee of the Appropriations Committee bluntly told Wickard that, as far as it was concerned, his request for 100 million dollars in subsidy money would be rejected.

Reliable observers last night predicted that Congress would legislate for higher farm prices, at least on needed crops, within 30 days. Congress and the Administration are running close to the deadline for planting 1943 crops. These crops, from which American soldiers and civilians will be fed in 1944, must be planted within the next 20 to 60 days.

In moving to kill the peanut bill, Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois yesterday urged the House to "insist" that the Agriculture Committee "come back" with an "overall" solution of food-production problems.

Unlimited Planting

The bill, supported by Wickard in a letter to the committee last month, would allow growers of peanuts, major source of scarce vegetable oil, to plant peanuts in unlimited quantities without payment of penalties for exceeding acreage allotments. Wheat growers could exceed acreage allotments without penalty for producing wheat for feeding livestock, while corn growers would be given the same privilege for the purpose of producing corn silage for dairy herds.

Dirksen protested that the bill failed to "get to the heart of the food problem and that it would provide 60 million dollars in subsidies for peanut farmers. Cannon also assailed the "subsidy" feature, called the measure a "log-rolling bill, a wire-pulling bill" that "favors one commodity and leaves others out in the cold."

The farm bloc was split in the vote on Dirksen's motion, members from wheat-and-corn-growing areas supporting the bill while legislators from other crop areas held back.

Cannon's motion to suspend action carried 123 to 111. Majjority Leader McCormack told the House that consideration of the bill would be resumed Tuesday.

Residents Warned Against Fake Rent Inspectors

Montgomery and Prince Georges County, Md., residents yesterday were warned to demand credentials from persons who ask to inspect their premises on the pretext of being OPA rent control inspectors.

James W. Woogerd, area rent director for the two counties, said he had received several complaints, principally in the Laurel and Silver Spring areas, that persons had gone to homes and demanded to make inspections.

Five inspectors accredited are Ralph Clements, Robert E. Heater, Robert A. Julia, Leland D. Abrams, and William T. Wrenn. Inspections are being made as a part of the program requiring inspection of properties rented after January 1, 1941.

Silver Spring Rescue Squad Saves Two Infants

Two Silver Spring (Md.) infants are alive today due to the alertness of the rescue squad of the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department.

At 6:04 o'clock last night Mrs. Leonard Isley, 416 Edgewood Avenue, Northwood Park, phoned the firemen that her one-year-old child, Steve, had stopped breathing. Within four minutes, the firemen arrived at the home 2 miles from the firehouse. They immediately administered oxygen and revived him 25 minutes later. The child had been ill.

In the afternoon the rescue squad probably saved the life of Alexander James Hill 3d, 13-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander James Hill, 10017 Brunett Avenue, Silver Spring. The child suffered an attack of convulsions and was later removed to the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, for further treatment.

would come in and a goal for 1944 would be established. Right now, he said, we can't even guess at it.

A reporter remarked there had been an argument that munitions and supplies could not be furnished for so large a force and also for lend-lease commitments. The President replied that there was absolutely nothing to that—that munitions would be available for all.

Asked for comment on the bill by Representative Kilday (Democrat) of Texas, to defer married men until all single men were drafted, the President said he was not familiar with the measure, but that the question was not one of married or single men but one of getting physically fit men.

The discussion of the size of the Army, was touched off by a question asking whether he had any suggestions relative to pending legislation which would affect the issue.

The President said he had but he did not know whether the time was ripe for them.

He remarked that a lot of people have wanted 10 or 12 or even 13 million in the Army for this year.

All kinds of details have developed over where the men will come from, he said, and these are being talked over. On the fighting end of things, he added, we have to have reasonably young men. Most men over 35, he said, are not good for combat service and can't stand up under two or three days of marching 30 miles a day.

Wallace to Be Washington Dinner Guest on Monday

Vice President Henry A. Wallace will be the principal guest at the dinner to be given by the George Washington Committee of the District of Columbia which will terminate their fund raising campaign Monday night at the Mayflower Hotel.

President Roosevelt will make a speech which will be broadcast over the Nation.

Members of the President's Cabinet are to attend as well as many prominent Government officials. Others from out of the city who will not be able to attend have agreed to permit servicemen to occupy their places.

Coffee, sugar and butter will not be served.

taken, members said, to forestall a threat of returning the measure to the committee on a point of order.

Disney, answering questions, agreed with the suggestion of a Treasury official that his bill would remove the controls now exercised over salaries by Economic Stabilization Director Byrnes, but said it would not upset the "Little Steel Formula" controlling wage increases.

Instead, Disney indicated, it would throw the question of controlling salary increases back to the Treasury. This agency could exert control only through its power to "disallow" in corporate tax returns any "unreasonable" salary increases. Treasury officials and Administration backers at the Capitol took the view that such tax power would be inadequate to block salary increases.

Disney said it was his intention to permit increases up to the ceiling of $67,200 gross income, the figure calculated to leave $25,000 net after taxes, as does the President's order. Salaries above that figure before the war, under the Disney plan, would be allowed to continue at their level of December 7, 1941.

In voting again for the Disney bill, the committee officially rejected the President's offer to trade his executive salary ceiling order for legislation that would establish a 100 per cent super-war tax to take all income from any source above $25,000 for single persons and $50,000 for couples.

Capitol Hill Folk Are Urged to Tap Spiritual Wells

Representative Percy Priest (Democrat) of Tennessee, yesterday urged fellow-legislators and Capitol Hill employes to "tap their spiritual wells" in these days of stress and strain.

The Congressman, active member of First Baptist Church here, spoke at a weekly fellowship luncheon—a project started last week by religious-minded folk on the Hill, led by George Herman Kendall, employe of the Senate mail room, and a theological student of the Nazarene faith. The function was held in the Speakers' dining room.

20 Bodies Recovered in Seattle

By International News Service

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 19.—Bodies charred beyond recognition were removed today from the smoking ruins of the Frye & Co. meat-packing plant, set ablaze Thursday when a heavy four-motored Boeing bomber struck the building and exploded, taking a toll of 29 lives.

A total of 22 bodies, among them all 11 technicians aboard the bomber, had been accounted for late today as searchers combed the smoking ruins for six other packing plant employes still reported missing. The twenty-ninth victim was a fireman.

A total of 20 bodies had been accounted for late today as searchers combed the smoldering ruins for 9 others missing.

Hospitals released 6 of 15 injured persons but reported 3 of the remaining patients were in critical condition.

The dead included all of the 11 members of the bomber test crew.

Edmund T. Allen, noted test pilot, was listed as pilot of the ill-fated bomber.

A second fire which broke out early today in the ruins caused the death of Luther D. Bonner, 22, Seattle fireman. Eleven other firemen were injured.

Officials of the Boeing Aircraft Co. issued a statement, which said:

"The accident resulted from a fire which developed in an engine in the course of a regular test flight," it said. "The fire, although extinguished temporarily by automatic carbon dioxide equipment, according to the plane's radio report, spread over one wing while the crew was making an approach to Boeing Field for an emergency landing.

"It was at this time that the plane struck power wires and the Frye & Co. plant."

Pan American Concert Tops War Parties

Hearing this weekend's program of recreational entertainment for servicemen and war workers will be the Pan American Union "pop" concert tomorrow at 4 p. m. presenting music and musicians from Brazil.

Compositions by Camargo Guarnieri, conductor, composer-pianist, and recent winner of the Samuel S. Fels award for the best violin concerto by a Latin American, will dominate the program to be held in the Hall of the Americas. Elsie Houston, Brazilian soprano, will sing a number of folk tunes composed by Guarnieri, who will accompany her at the piano. Iso Briselli, will render some of Guarnieri's violin pieces.

Also on the city-wide program for the servicemen and war workers are dances, suppers, religious services and tours.

Other activities for servicemen in the District include:

War Sidelights

War Writers Casualty Ratio High

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Editor and Publisher, newspaper trade magazine, said today the casualty rate among United States war correspondents since Pearl Harbor was three to four times greater proportionately than battle casualties of the United States Army.

The ratio of Army casualties to the number serving overseas was less than 5 per cent up to January 31, 1943, while those of the press were 15 to 20 per cent of the total number of correspondents on war duty abroad.

Of the 300 to 350 correspondents serving abroad, Editor and Publisher said 10 were killed or died on duty; 26 were wounded or hurt, 2 are missing, and 22 captured or interned.

Tirpitz at Sea Again

London, Feb. 19 (AP).—A Reuters dispatch from Stockholm today said the Tirpitz, Germany's most powerful battleship, has been engaging in target practice in the North Sea.

The agency said apparently the damage inflicted on the battleship by a Russian submarine in the Barents Sea last July had been repaired and the warship possibly was getting ready for raiding operations.

Canberra, Australia, Feb. 19 (AP).—Senator James Fraser, Minister for External Territories, announced today that owners of rubber and copra plantations could return to Papua, southeastern part of the island of New Guinea, from which the Japanese have been driven.

The improvement in the military situation, he said, made possible the fullest development of the copra and rubber resources there.

The meeting was held in honor of the women members of the new Congress, and guests included Senator Hattie Caraway of Arkansas and Representative Winifred Stanley of New York.

New Pipeline Dedicated as Aid to Victory

Norris City, Ill., Feb. 19 (AP).—Ralph K. Davies, Deputy Petroleum Administrator for War, today dedicated the Texas-to-Illinois oil pipe line as a "tool for the quickest possible defeat of our enemies."

Davies spoke at ceremonies at the temporary Midwestern terminus of the 24-inch line as the first train of tank cars was filled for shipment to the Atlantic seaboard. Rail shipments will be started tonight.

Oil was flowing through the line at the rate of 50,000 barrels daily and was expected to reach a daily maximum of 300,000 in the next six to eight weeks.

Asserting the line would not supply "any but the most essential needs of civilian consumption," Davies said:

"The future is scarcely more certain than it was just 200 days ago when the first pipe was laid for this 531-mile Texas-to-Illinois section."

Plans Reported Made to Remove Pope to Brazil

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Feb. 19.—The Brooklyn Eagle printed a story, written by Michael Williams, a member of its editorial staff and the former editor of the Catholic weekly, the Commonweal, advancing the "thesis" that a plan has been worked out "to carry out safely, and as speedily as possible, the evacuation of Pope Pius XII from the Vatican" to "temporary headquarters to be established in Latin America."

Williams expressed the belief that the mission of the Most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, archbishop of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, on his present journey to Europe, is to present this plan to the Pope.

Brazil was listed as the country which "obviously would be selected as the best possible refuge for the Pope."

There was no confirmation of the story by Catholic church leaders here. In fact, some high in the church were inclined to place no credence in it.

New Contract Bridge Code Issued for U. S.

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 19.—The rules and scoring of contract bridge are being revised for the first time since 1935 with the publication of a 1943 code of laws today.

A 50-point bonus has been granted for making any doubled or redoubled contract whether vulnerable or not. Another 50-point bonus will be given for having a part-score in an unfinished game of an unfinished rubber.

The lead-out-of-turn law has been changed so that the declarer, when the wrong opponent leads against him, may either call the lead of any suit or forbid the lead of any suit he wishes to name.

The penalty for the revoke is still two tricks, as it was in the 1935 code, but in the new laws there is no additional penalty when the same player revokes a second time in the same suit.

Committees representing the Whist Club of New York, which has made the bridge laws in this country since 1905, and the American Contract Bridge League, which controls tournament bridge in the United States, agreed upon the changes.

The 1943 laws drop the efforts of the 1935 committees to eliminate the name "dummy" from the bridge laws. In previous laws he was called "declarer's partner," but bridge players persisted in calling him the dummy, and the laws now recognize him officially by that name.

More liberal than their predecessors in many respects, the new laws provide that if a player makes an improper bid, due to a slip of the tongue, he may correct himself without penalty.

The new bridge rules are an American code only for the first time since November 1, 1932. The British committee representing the Portland Club of London was not willing to publish a new code in England during the war, it was said.

U. S. Fliers Blast Four Jap Vessels In Solomons

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Saturday), Feb. 20 (AP).—Striking at Japan's vital merchant marine off Buin in the Solomon Islands, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's heavy bombers yesterday damaged four cargo ships aggregating 27,000 tons.

Two of the vessels, one of 9000 and the other of 7000 tons, were left blazing from the shattering force of 500-pound bombs.

Two other Japanese ships, a 5000-ton merchantman and a small troop transport, were attacked off Gasmata and Cape Gloucester, New Britain, in the face of a Japanese fighter escort and the results of the attack were not observed. Four Jap fighters were shot down.

The 44-year-old member of the Army Air Forces, whose home is in New York, was cited for "gallantry and intrepidity in action."

24 Nazi Planes Destroyed by U. S.

London, Feb. 19 (AP).—The Eighth United States Air Force announced today that 24 German fighters had been destroyed by B-17 Flying Fortresses and B-24 Liberators in the Americans' last two daylight bombing missions, at Dunkerque February 15 and at St. Nazaire February 16, against a loss of eight of the bombers.

Four of the Nazi fighters and two of the United States bombers fell over Dunkerque, where the raiders were reported to have wrought "great damage to docks and shipping." Twenty fighters and six bombers were destroyed in the fighting developed by the attack against U-boat installations at St. Nazaire.

Barber Traps Light-Fingered Boy With Ad

It was a far-fetched idea, perhaps, but it worked.

Mason W. McCary, who runs a barber shop at 845 Upshur Street Northwest, hired a Negro porter recently. The boy worked one day and left, taking with him an overcoat and a suit coat belonging to one of the barbers.

McCary went to see a fellow barber, C. W. Gardner, whose shop is at 4925 Georgia Avenue Northwest, asked him to run a Post classified ad for a porter with the hope that the clothes-lifter would answer it.

Gardner agreed. Next morning the culprit appeared, wearing both stolen coats. McCary was waiting, called police, and last night the 17-year-old boy was back at National Training School, from which he had escaped.

Hecht Case

It is satisfactory to note that the Hecht Co. has been cleared of the charge of willfully violating the general maximum price regulations of OPA. The clearance was by no means perfunctory. District Court Justice F. Dickinson Letts gave the company a complete exoneration. He said that far from being antagonistic, the company has been "cooperative." This was brought out in the testimony. When the price regulations preceding "General Max" came out, the company set up a special department, with specific instructions to study the regulations and advise the company. The office was expanded when "General Max" was issued.

But how OPA could expect complete allegiance to the mammoth and detailed regulations under "General Max" and its subsequent amendments passes comprehension. The Hecht Co. has a hundred different departments which are virtually stores in themselves. All together about 200,000 items are sold. Under "General Max" the price was fixed on all these items at the highest delivered price at which those items were sold last March. The problem of the "buyer," or the departmental manager, was to find it. Last March the company sold its goods at various figures, the reason being that March was a sale month. Some of the goods were not sold. Imagine the difficulty of complying in every respect with such a complex order. Imagine trying to understand the tome of regulations even before trying to carry them out. Nevertheless the court held that the company had done everything possible to comply.

What comes out of this case is something even more significant than the restoration of the good name of a respected local store. "General Max" must go. If regulations are impossible to comply with, there must be something wrong with the regulations. The basis of retail-price control should be "mark-ons" figured on costs. This system would be simpler to administer and capable of being obeyed. "General Max," with its amendments piling confusion upon confusion, has been a headache to both OPA and the retail community. It has made cooperation virtually impossible. And, if price control is to be a success, surely the basic requirement is cooperation.

Mr. Wickard Dissents

It is said that Secretary Wickard is opposed to ceiling prices for livestock on the farm. He argues that livestock ceiling prices might well encourage sales to black-market buyers in the absence of comprehensive controls at every stage of meat production and distribution. The chief trouble with Mr. Wickard's argument is that it assumes the absence of any effective controls over distribution of meat products from farmer to ultimate consumer. Of course, whenever and wherever controls are inadequate and opportunities for illegal gains are easy to exploit, some sellers are going to yield to temptation whether they are growers of livestock or distributors of other scarce commodities.

But the ability to maintain price ceilings at retail levels has been made exceptionally difficult in the case of meat products because of the failure to control prices of livestock on the farm and to relate those prices to the ceiling prices imposed on packers and distributors of meat products. It is the alleged "squeezing" of many small packers caught between rising livestock prices and fixed sales prices for meat that is a major cause of the present demoralization. Black markets flourish more easily and are harder to suppress when the regulatory system gives rise to undeserved hardships of this kind.

It is quite true that the mere setting of ceiling prices for cattle, hogs, etc., is not going to solve the problem presented by black markets. However, it would make possible a more intelligent approach to solution of those problems. If regulation at the retail and wholesale end of the productive process were balanced by regulation of sales prices at the primary producer end, with allowance for markups sufficient to cover intermediate processing and distributive costs plus reasonable profits, the stage would be set for a real house cleaning that would sweep out the conscienceless profiteers. Obviously, no sort of price regulations, good or bad, can be maintained for long without stricter enforcement than we have had so far, aided by the long-delayed rationing of meat products.

It cannot be said too often or too emphatically that the foundation of all effective price regulation is an economically sound method of approach that regulates basic production costs as well as prices to the ultimate consumer. So far we have not had that kind of regulation for meat products, and if Secretary Wickard has his way it seems we shall not have an opportunity of proving its superiority.

On Pulling Together

Every day brings fresh evidence that Congress and the Administration are not pulling together. There has been no open break on any major issue. The session is not far enough advanced for that. But friction arising over relatively minor issues has assumed disturbing proportion for wartime, and that friction is growing. The House, in particular, sees red every time the issue of bureaucracy is raised. And instead of cooperating with the House to minimize this source of irritation—in return for cooperation of the House on even more vital issues—the President is letting the situation go from bad to worse.

The President is understandably concerned over the House vote to cut off the National Resources Planning Board without a dollar. Perhaps it would be still more difficult for him to forsake his pet project of limiting incomes to $25,000 a year for the duration. But the inescapable fact is that Congress intends to legislate on these and many other subjects of domestic policy in its own way. Instead of yielding to executive pressure, it is in a mood to reject minor White House proposals simply because they come from the White House. And it has the strength to do so. It would be a national tragedy if that mood, encouraged by an unyielding attitude on the part of the Administration, should lead to an open conflict between the two major branches of the Government in wartime.

The fate of the NRPB and the limit on salaries is utterly insignificant compared with the weighty problems of the war, the subsequent peace, and the reconstruction that must follow. Surely it is the function of statesmen to keep their minds riveted on these major issues. But where can we find any preparation that is being made to meet the challenge that the approach of peace will bring? Senator Wiley proposed some months ago that a council be set up to study peace problems and to convey the advice of the Senate to the President before there is an attempt to lay down definite peace terms. Some means of bringing the executive and leaders of the Senate together in an exploration of this issue is of the utmost importance, as our sad experience following World War I amply testifies.

Modification of the rule requiring a two-thirds majority in the Senate to ratify treaties is another urgent preliminary to peacemaking. Unless that reform can soon be started on its way to approval by the States, we may once more see one-third of the Senate plus one thwarting Administration efforts to make our peace secure. That would be a tragedy of incalculable proportions. Yet it is a probability that we must face if the present method of ratifying treaties continues in effect.

Even more important than any legislative changes in bringing about the desired understanding are the informal relations between the President and members of the Senate and House. At present a vast number of legislators resent the fact that the President is not taking them into his confidence. Antagonism grows because there is nothing to counteract it. In the absence of bipartisan discussions of policy, there is no meeting of minds and very little sense of responsibility on the part of those who are left on the rim of the official circle. What Washington needs most of all, therefore, is a sense of pulling together. The absence of such teamwork is not wholly the fault of either the President or Congress, but the result may be disastrous to both and to the country as well unless the present drift toward an open break can be overcome.

Political Holiday

Misuse of judicial robes as a reward for political service stands out with undisguised blatancy from the nomination of former Gov. James V. Allred of Texas to be a judge of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. Judge Allred was first rewarded for political services rendered to the New Deal when he was appointed to the Federal district bench before his term as Governor had expired in 1938. Last year he resigned from the court to plunge into politics once more as the New Deal candidate for the office of Senator from Texas. He was decisively beaten by Senator W. Lee O'Daniel. Now President Roosevelt has handed him his second reward—a promotion to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

It was freely predicted during the Texas campaign that, since Mr. Allred was simply carrying the ball for the President in an effort to unseat Senator O'Daniel, he would be fully rewarded for his efforts. In fact, it was evident at that time that Judge Foster of New Orleans would not be physically able to return to the bench. Did this prospective vacancy on the Fifth Circuit Court give Judge Allred added incentive to lay aside his robes and lead a political foray? In any event, he did jump from the Federal district bench into a political campaign as a "yes" man for the President and is now catapulted to a higher judicial post for his trouble.

The practice of appointing lame ducks and defeated candidates to judicial posts is in itself bad enough. We cannot expect to maintain an expert, independent and high-minded judiciary if judgeships are handed out as political rewards to men who have been repudiated by their own constituents. But the customary lame-duck appointment is a model of impeccability compared to this outrageous use of the Federal bench as a haven for a politician who resigns at the psychological moment to champion the political cause of his benefactor. As a protest against this gross abuse of the appointive power, the Senate would do well to inform Mr. Allred, through a rejection of his nomination, that he cannot play the game of off-again-on-again with the United States courts, as if they were a political bandwagon.

Still No Health Funds

No one is likely to take exception to the sound theory of administering public funds as set forth in the recent agreement between the United States Public Health Service and the Federal Works Agency under guidance of the Budget Bureau. "Where specific legislative authority exists for a particular type of project or function," the agreement provides, "such project or function will not be financed under the general authority of the Lanham Act." The reasoning is impeccable. Still the fact remains that the decision will deprive this syphilis-infested and rat-invaded Capital of funds it needs to combat wartime menaces to health.

What the Budget Bureau has done is to divide the field of emergency health service between the USPHS and the FWA. "For a limited time" the FWA may finance the construction, purchase, rental, or renovation of quarters for public health purposes in cities overburdened by war work. It may also allot funds for maintenance of such projects. Presumably this will permit the granting of funds to the District for rental of three much-needed health centers.

But all responsibility for assisting in the financing of health services is left to the USPHS. Federal aid for public health nurses, mental hygiene, housekeeping aides to keep many patients out of our overcrowded hospitals, and so forth, can be obtained only through the USPHS. Even services rendered by health centers fall into the same category. That would be reasonable enough in peacetime, but the ugly fact now staring us in the face is that the USPHS has no funds that can be spent for these purposes. The agreement thus means that the FWA is free to advance funds for the rental of local health centers, but there will be no funds to staff them once the buildings have been provided.

We don't believe that Congress contemplated any such hairsplitting when it passed the special Lanham Act to protect the Capital against the hazards of overcrowding. Even the OWI release seems to imply that Lanham Act funds could be used to hire professional health workers when it says that the "general authority of the Lanham Act" will not be used for this purpose. As matters stand, the will of Congress appears to have been thwarted by overfine departmentalization of the emergency health program. In any event, the effect of this official hairsplitting is to leave the Capital exposed to the ravages of wartime plagues and epidemics, some of which are already doing their deadly work.

It is particularly disheartening to realize that the issue will have to be fought through the congested labyrinth of Congress once more. But there now seems to be no alternative. The District Commissioners are already talking of a deficiency appropriation. We hope that they will lose no time in asking for it. And since the Budget Bureau and the Public Health Service have scuttled the local Lanham Act, the least they can do is to throw their influence behind the city's demand for an appropriation that can actually be used.

THE FOG

There was a long ride to make early in the morning,
In the cool summer morning before the sun was up.
Shivering a little, they climbed into the wagon—
He and his father—blew out the lantern, and "giddup!"

When he awoke they were past all familiar places:
There was no house that he knew, no barn, no field, no tree.
The strangeness startled him, and he grasped his father's arm . . .
"Oh, look, look!" he cried. "Aren't we off the road? Where are we?"

"We're almost to Rutledge now—you nearly missed the lake."
And the boy looked to where his father pointed, and there,
Sure enough, was a lake settled in the great valley,
Beautiful in the twilight, lovely beyond all compare.

But he did not think the word "beautiful" or "lovely":
He thought only: Coming back he'd see this lake once more . . .
A lake in one's own county you couldn't see across!
And why had no one ever told him of this place before?

When, at midday, home-bound, they came around the road's bend
To the valley, the boy caught his breath—there was no lake . . .
Only a vast green country, where crops grew, cattle grazed,
And a creek wound among the willows like a shining snake.

Relations With Panama

By Virginia Prewett

Details To Adjust

THE FIRST legislation with important bearing on Latin-American affairs to come before the new Congress, a joint resolution to make effective a tentative agreement with Panama, has started through the legislative mill and is due to follow lease-lend on the Foreign Affairs Committee docket.

An identical resolution was reported favorably by the Foreign Affairs and the Foreign Relations Committees last session and was approved by the Senate on December 4. The House could not act because so many members had gone home by that date that there were no more quorums before the session's end.

The resolution proposes: (1) To give Panama title to water and sewage works we built 35 years ago in Panama City and Colon. (2) To give her title to lots in the two cities that the Panama Railroad owns and rents for private residential and business use. (3) To appropriate money to cancel a $2,500,000 loan that the Export-Import Bank made to Panama in 1940 as partial financing for a highway from the Canal Zone to the Rio Hafo air base.

Right to Intervene

To understand how these operations fit into present United States-Panamanian cooperation to build military and political bulwarks around the Canal, it is necessary to review our relations with Panama. After the Panamanians, with aid from the railroad, won independence from Colombia in 1903, they made a treaty that gave us rights to intervene at will to police their country and to take any land needed for the Canal. The young republic had a very limited sovereignty.

At that time we were beginning the Big Stick and Dollar Diplomacy for Latin America. Between 1903 and 1933 we intervened with military occupations many times in Panama, Cuba, Haiti, Nicaragua and Santo Domingo and indirectly in Mexico and other Latin-American republics. This was strongly resented and became an issue in which they all united against us.

The United States abandoned this policy in favor of the Good Neighbor Policy in 1933 and it was not a day too soon. In 1934 Germany, under Hitler, had already started a trade and propaganda drive in Latin America in which they used our outgrown mistakes against us.

A new treaty with Panama, effective in 1939, set up the principle that friendship, cooperation and shared responsibility for the Canal should govern relations between a sovereign Panama and ourselves.

In early 1941 it became obvious that Canal defenses were entirely inadequate in a world at war. Our Government invoked the treaty of 1939 in asking Panama to cooperate in strengthening these defenses, which meant installing airfields, gun emplacements, observation posts and bombing ranges throughout Panama. Their President by decree at once permitted us to start building 80 of these military posts.

In settling business details, Panama leased us all the public land we had occupied for $1 a year for the duration. They agreed to pay all indemnities for private property occupied upon payment by us of a yearly rental of $20 a hectare. We assumed cost of military roads, but Panama agreed to pay two-thirds of the maintenance of these roads.

In this action, Panama complied fully with the spirit and the letter of the 1939 Treaty of Friendship and Cooperation.

At the time this was done, in May, 1941, the debt for the Rio Hato Highway and the status of the waterworks and the railroad real estate were brought up as conditions that Panama felt worked an inequity upon her in her relations with us. The highway, begun before the emergency, had already been turned into a military road, and Panama felt that she should not pay for part of its construction. The waterworks have been approximately two-thirds paid for by amortization. Panama feels that perhaps if they had had a say on bookkeeping procedure, these works would have been fully amortized by now. They believe that for our Government to own and run their water systems does not fit in with a status of sovereignty.

U. S. Commercial Activity

The real estate came into the railroads' control through a concession granted by New Granada, afterwards Colombia, in 1857. The property is not used for railroad purposes or for the Canal. To put it simply, Panama cannot see why, after they have turned over all the public lands that we need for defense purposes at a yearly rental of $1, the United States Government should continue to hold land under an old concession and operate it as a commercially profitable enterprise. They feel that it is not in keeping with the new basis of relations between the two countries.

The actual cash outlay required to make these adjustments is an appropriation of something over $2,500,000 to cancel the highway debt. But the issue involved here cannot be reduced to money terms.

The kind of loyalty that Panama has showed the United States in the war emergency cannot be bought. Panama did not sell us their quick and effective cooperation, they gave it. But their disappointment when the last Congress did not come through with what they think a fair adjustment of three business details was very keen. The responsibility of the new Congress in this matter is direct. Not only Panama, but all the other Latin-American nations that have cast their lot with us since we abandoned the dollar principle in favor of cooperation and fair dealing will watch closely to see what is done.

Mme. Chiang's Appeal

By Barnet Nover

China And Allied Strategy

NEWS FROM CHINA provides a grim obbligato to the eloquent plea made by Mme. Chiang Kai-shek to Americans to recognize that Japan remains a "vital potential threat" to the United Nations, a "waiting sword of Damocles, ready to descend at a moment's notice."

Even while the first lady of China was speaking, the Japanese land forces on the mainland of Asia were striking out in seven separate directions in what is obviously a new effort to crush Chinese resistance.

This latest Japanese offensive may peter out as did the offensive of last May. But we cannot afford to bank on that. The very circumstance that Japan has met with serious reverses at such offshore points as New Guinea and Guadalcanal may make them more determined than ever to regain "face" by winning a smashing victory on the mainland.

BUT THE FACTOR of prestige is only one of the reasons why the Japanese are again on the march in China.

The Japanese realize that time is only partially on their side. Given time and they will be able to exploit the vast resources which they have conquered and which, Mme. Chiang reminds us, are greater than those which Germany possesses. Given time, and they may be able to make every conquered island as difficult for the Allies to recapture as was Guadalcanal.

But the Japanese are also aware, as the fighting of the past eight months has so dramatically brought home to them, that Allied strength in the Pacific area is on the increase, despite the fact that the principal emphasis thus far has been in fighting Hitler.

OF ALL THE BASES actually or potentially in Allied hands, the one of greatest importance, so far as carrying the war directly to Japan is concerned, is China.

In the first place, the largest United Nations military force in the Pacific theater is the Chinese army.

Secondly, the reconquest by the Allies of airfields in northeastern China now in Japanese hands would make possible an aerial offensive against Tokyo, Kobe and Osaka.

Thirdly, from China, land-based air attacks could be launched at the far-flung Japanese supply lines, extending from the home islands to the conquered areas of the Southwest Pacific. These shipping routes must all use the relatively narrow passage between Formosa and South China.

IT IS OF VITAL importance to Japan, therefore, to smash the Chinese army, if possible, and even if that cannot be done at least to break up Chinese troop concentrations at those points where they are in perilous proximity to the coastal region from which an Allied aerial offensive may ultimately be launched.

On the other hand, it is of equally vital importance to the Allies to prevent Japan from knocking China out as a belligerent but, on the contrary, to make China as strong as possible. Yet the past year, which has seen the Allies growing stronger in the Pacific area generally, also witnessed a deterioration in Chinese military strength.

The Japanese conquest of Burma, which meant the cutting of the Burma Road life line, was a blow which has had a cumulatively weakening effect on China. During this past year China has been forced to live very largely on her meager reserves, supplemented by the driblet of supplies that have reached her from the outside world by air transport.

Before China can be transformed into a major base for offensive operations two developments must occur. In the first place, Burma must be reconquered and the Burma Road reopened. Secondly the Mediterranean route must be made secure. This means the elimination of the Axis from Tunisia and in view of what has been happening there recently this is likely to prove a slow and expensive affair.

IN THE MEANTIME, however, there is every reason why the air transport route from India to China should be expanded. This has been done to some extent during recent months. But the expansion has been confined to extremely narrow limits.

It is true, of course, that the demands on our production of war material and on our air transport facilities are tremendous. At the present time, as is clearly brought out in the latest Foreign Policy Headline book, "America's Battle Fronts," our men and materiel are being shipped to no fewer than 32 major points outside continental United States.

Yet by any calculation, the percentage that has gone to China has been inadequate. An increased flow of supplies to that beleaguered country, which has been fighting against great odds for more than five and a half years, is definitely in order.

The broad lines of strategy have already been laid down. They cannot easily be changed nor would it be wise, at this juncture, to change them. But insofar as a greater allocation of supplies to China is possible it should be carried out quickly. The recent victories we have won in New Guinea and the Solomons should not make us complacent over the situation in the Pacific theater as a whole.

Letters To The Editor

American Anti-Fascists Ignored By Government

In the February 14 Post, Mr. Andre Visson wrote that the British and American governments would not deal with any Fascist elements in Italy, but would work for the installation of a democratic regime in that unhappy land. He stated that it was much easier to spot an Italian Fascist than a French Fascist.

As a matter of fact there is no reason at all to believe that either our State Department or Mr. Churchill will have any clearer vision on Italy than that displayed in French North Africa. Mr. Churchill has repeatedly blamed Italy's travail upon "one man and one man only . . . the jackal Mussolini" and not upon the Fascist system. There is no indication whatsoever that Mr. Churchill is unwilling to deal with the King, the conservative army leaders and Count Grandi—who have been parties to all of Mussolini's villainies and partners in perfecting the Fascist system.

Fears as to our own Government's expertness in distinguishing between Fascists and democrats are based not only upon the North African developments but also upon the activities of the Justice and Treasury Departments and the Office of War Information in urging Italian anti-Fascists in the United States to collaborate with pre-Pearl Harbor Italian-American Fascists and Fascist apologists—the men who at the time of Italy's invasion of Ethiopia sent money and copper to Il Duce.

Mr. Visson in his article brushed over this point by alleging that the Italian anti-Fascists should not object to such a procedure as they are not unified themselves. The argument is not a convincing one. If a man is having a family spat with his wife he is still not obligated to admit his worst enemy to his home. As a matter of fact, however, there is a great deal of working unity amongst the genuine Italian anti-Fascists in this country. We still have a long, hard fight ahead, and it will be very much longer and very much harder if we do not do all we possibly can to strengthen China.

The Government agencies named, however, have urged these democratic forces to cooperate with the pro-Fascist "prominenti" and with Communist groups.

It was against this background that the late heroic Carlo Tresca was assassinated. The essentially loyal and nonpolitical mass of Italian-Americans have been confused by these various machinations, and most thoughtful anti-Fascists have, regretfully, taken a much less optimistic view of the future of Anglo-American Italian relations than Mr. Visson's article would lead one to suspect.

Mr. Visson states that Italian anti-Fascists have withdrawn their charges against OWI and other Government agencies. This is at best a half truth. There has been no denial that the Government has urged cooperation with "reformed" Fascists, and Luigi Antonini's partial retraction of the original charges was, according to one of his friends, motivated solely by "his almost blind loyalty to President Roosevelt."

Recently Mr. Vanni Montana, a friend of Tresca's, close associate of Antonini, and secretary of the Federation of Italian Socialists in America, a group closely allied with the democratic underground in Italy, stated: "The fundamental issue is whether the OWI is to continue to be used as a cooperating agency for the Communists . . . and whether the American Government will still be fooled into allowing it to be used as a means of bolstering up the discredited Communist Party here and in Italy."

He went on to say that OWI had for a time refused to let him broadcast to Italy the civil disobedience manifesto of the underground Italian Socialist movement—a manifesto actually drafted in Italy, and had broadcast to Italy a resolution sponsored solely by a Communist front group in America. Subsequently, OWI permitted Mr. Montana to broadcast the manifesto, but did not let him say that it was drafted in Italy, destroying a major part of its value.

These facts are well known to Italian and other anti-Fascists in America. They know that the American Government is ignoring them in its power "politicking." Several Italian anti-Fascists who long before Pearl Harbor or the invasion of Russia were calling for war against the Axis are now asking themselves if it is possible to defeat Fascism by the methods being employed by the United States and Great Britain.

The 1943 Derby

The Kentucky Derby, America's most touted racing classic, will be held May 1, with all outside attendance discouraged and as strictly a Louisville event, with the fans reaching the track on foot, by horse and buggy or by streetcar.

* * * *

Imagine it! A great horse race turning out as the greatest propaganda for pedestrianism ever staged!

* * * *

We can hear the broadcaster now, saying: "Ladies and gentlemen, here we are at Churchill Downs . . . practically alone!"

* * * *

And continuing, "Just a minute, folks! . . . Two bicyclists just pulled in by the main gate! . . . I see a hay-wagon full of natives coming down the turnpike. . . . The pedestrians are giving a splendid demonstration of local pride.

* * * *

"I have just learned that the stewards for this event will be Postmaster General Frank Walker, Jimmy Walker and Johnny Walker . . . . Matt Winn just hiked into the grounds under escort of the Foot Guard.

* * * *

"Listen, folks! Can you hear that noise? He is getting a tremendous cheer from the Association of Shoe Manufacturers.

* * * *

"The Stevens brothers, who do the catering, have just arrived. Frank has a pronounced limp, but Joe is all right save for a bad callous on his right foot.

* * * *

"The hot dog has never before seemed so appropriate a food for a sporting event. The specialty of the house today will be Filet of Sole.

* * * *

"A Louisville shoemaker will act as starter to keep the proper note for today's classic and immediately after the race the Governor of Kentucky will properly mark the spirit of the occasion by coming to the winner's circle and taking a foot bath with the only movie queen to show up this year.

Bombers are now rolling off the production lines of the Ford plants. And this fact won't make the Axis feel any better. We can imagine nothing so alarming as the air full of Fords.

Well if you can't send your son to college these days you can be fairly certain the Army or Navy will.

A rush of panicky buying of men's and women's clothes is reported, although plans to ration them are denied at Washington. No man wants to be caught with only 10 shirts to his back.

And you know how a woman feels about the prospect of getting down to her last trunk.

Postwar Control

European countries of the Axis need democratic conditioning under Allied direction and control, and after victory we should send immigrants from America to take jobs there and force the use of English on the whole Axis area. Thus Axis customs, habits and language could be changed and by careful use of a mildly administered migration of people from one part of the Axis world to another under Allied control a gradual infusion of democratic ideas, ideals and blood would impregnate the entire Axis territory after a period of four generations or about 100 years.

It behooves us as a free country to do this in order to demolish the probability of another global war within a generation or two.

Dies Committee

Congress should keep the Dies Committee even if, to make room for it, several dozen utterly useless, tax-eating, nonwar bureaus have to be chucked on the scrap heap where they belong.

This is the will of the people and the New Deal claims to heed the will of the people. (Perhaps they mean only when formulated or guided by themselves.)

Weigh the opposition and you will find a bureaucrat, a demagogue, a professional class-hate specialist of the sort made famous by the New Deal or one in need of just such offices as the Dies Committee offers.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Aftermath Of Casablanca

BIT BY BIT we begin to see why the men who conferred at Casablanca were so much more optimistic about what they had done than was the world which studied anxiously the first official announcements. The advance notices had promised a more dramatic agreement of the United Nations and at first it looked as if no agreement had been reached.

YET subsequent events have shown that in addition to the military decisions there was very substantial progress toward political agreement. It seemed as if Russia had stood aloof or had been left out. Yet immediately afterwards Mr. Churchill went to Turkey, and soon it was evident that Russo-Turkish relations are improved to a point where an understanding about the war and the postwar settlement has been reached or is in sight. Turkey is on the vital southern end of Russia's European frontier, and is therefore an acid test of what can be done to reach a constructive understanding between Russia and the western nations.

This was followed shortly by a speech of the Polish Prime Minister, General Sikorski, which pointed to Poland's need of East Prussia in order to give Poland firmer access to the sea than was ever possible through the old Corridor. General Sikorski is in London, has been in Washington, and will it is hoped be going to Moscow. A Poland with assured access to the Baltic would be strong and no longer enclosed in eastern Europe. It could, therefore, satisfy the Russians that its policy would not be anti-Russian. Assured on that crucial point, the Russians would have no interest in dealing harshly with the Polish frontier, and a very strong interest in dealing with it so as to win the confidence of Poland and of Poland's friends.

IT SEEMED that China had been forgotten at Casablanca. Now we know that Field Marshal Sir John Dill and General Arnold went from Casablanca to Chungking and to India, and obviously they did not go as sightseeing tourists. Upon his return the President told us that "we do not expect to spend the time it would take to bring Japan to final defeat merely by inching our way forward from island to island across the vast expanse of the Pacific." The President would not have said this, while high British and American staff officers were conferring with General Chiang Kai-shek, if China were not to play a decisive part in the war.

IT SEEMS that nothing particular was accomplished in improving the political condition among the French. But in fact there is increasing evidence of a decided turn for the better since the President and the Prime Minister took a direct instead of an indirect hand in the matter. What they did chiefly, it would seem, was to begin the reeducation of the French authorities who had been living for over two years behind the curtain of Axis-Vichy censorship and propaganda.

That is why the general atmosphere is clearing in North Africa, why measured steps are being taken to qualify France once more as a partner of the United Nations, why some objectionable officials are being replaced and others—let us say—coordinated. That is why Gen. de Gaulle's Fighting Frenchmen, and General Giraud's Frenchmen who mean to fight, are—in North Africa, in London, and in Washington—seeking one another out and coming to know and trust one another again.

THAT the intervention of the President and the Prime Minister was firm is evident from what the President has said since his return. When Mr. Roosevelt declared that Frenchmen will "be represented by a government of their own popular choice," and that we had not "the remotest idea of keeping the Quislings or Lavals in power," he was serving notice that none of the temporary arrangements we made imply tacit or secret engagements to perpetuate the Vichy counter-revolution, and that in restoring French military power in the empire, the army will not be used to deny to France a republican form of government.

And when Mr. Roosevelt on his return has several times pointed to Dakar and insisted that it must be in absolutely reliable hands, his position was made even more explicit. He indentified American strategic security with the restoration in France of a regime purged of collaborationist, fascist, and quasi-fascist influence. He was saying in effect that we are pledged to restore the French empire only to a democratic French Republic. For only that kind of France can be trusted in maintaining the peace and order of the Atlantic and the tranquility of the republics of the Western Hemisphere.

THE GOOD CAUSE would now be promoted, the good work could now go forward more auspiciously, if there were an end to the inspired self-justifying apologetics which began by saying that all was well in North Africa when in fact it was not, and are now proceeding to argue that since things are much better, it had always been planned that way.

The fact is that a bad situation is being retrieved and turned around towards a better prospect. It did not retrieve itself and turn itself around without the intervention of the Allied leaders backed by a great tide of opinion. There was never any ground for complacency about it, and fortunately those who are in the highest places were never complacent about it. There is not now ground for complacency. The convalescence of France, the undoing of the poisonous consequences of the defeat and of the betrayal, of the desertion, and of the subversive overthrow of French institutions, will be a long arduous struggle. For that struggle the price of liberty is, as always, not the easy and complacent way but eternal vigilance.

Group Cites Ford Gains

'Vast Improvement'

By David J. Wilkie

Associated Press Staff Writer

Detroit, Feb. 19.—A Senate committee investigating war production learned at first hand today how manpower shortage and design changes have retarded volume production of the giant B-14 bomber planes at the Ford-operated Willow Run factory.

"There is no question," said Senator Wallgren (Democrat), Washington, after a tour through the plant, "that production has been handicapped by constant changes in the model."

At the same time, Wallgren added, "there has been a vast improvement at Willow Run over what we saw here a year ago. Willow Run compares very avorably with any plant in the country on actual work being done."

The subcommittee of the Truman Investigating Committee consisted of Senators Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia, Ferguson (Republican, Michigan, Burton (Republican), Ohio, and Ball, (Republican), Minnesota in addition to Wallgren.

Edsel Ford Guides Party

From Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co. who accompanied them on a tour of the Ford River Rouge plant and the Willow Run factory the Senators obtained figures on an unusually heavy turnover of workers at the bomber plant. The company, the committee was told, would like to hire 400 workers a day but has experienced many days on which more workers quit than were hired.

Senator Ferguson said this plainly was due to inadequate transportation and housing accommodations. He said efforts would be made to remedy these problems through the War Production Board and the Office of Defense Transportation.

He announced that he and Hugh Fulton, committee counsel, would remain in Detroit for a few days to further study the transportation problem. He indicated that the committee believed bus and motor-car transportation could be supplemented by the establishment of commuter train service between Detroit and the bomber plant some 25 miles from the city.

After the plant inspection tour Senator Wallgren emphasized that the committee was not trying to find fault with operations at Willow Run.

Labor Turnover High

"It isn't a question of somebody being blamed for something," he said. "It's a question of getting bombers out as rapidly as possible and into the fight."

Figures presented by Edsel Ford and other company officials showed that while employment at Willow Run now is in excess of 30,000 men and women, the turn-over has been so great that more than 10,000 have resigned since last summer, half of them to enter military service. The figures also confirmed that the plant is aiming at a peak production of something like 20 of the big bombers daily later this year.

Earlier in the day, at the committee's invitation, the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) presented its views on conditions at Willow Run and announced that a brief would be filed describing working conditions and employe morale.

The Gallup Poll

Growing Disparity Between Farm and Factory Wage Rates Found Squeezing U. S. Farmers

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

The following article, one of a series by the Gallup Poll on farm problems today, shows how the farmer is suffering by his inability to bridge the gap between what he can afford to pay for his farm help and what factories can afford to pay their labor.

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 19.—Farmers who employ help have lost many workers to the draft and also to war industries. The reason for the latter is clear when farm wages are compared with factory wages.

An accurate picture of the going wage rate on farms in all sections of the country is revealed in a special survey by the Institute. The results indicate that persons interested in farm production problems can afford to give much study to the great disparity between what farmers can pay their help and what factories can pay.

While it is true that even in peacetime, factory wages were nearly always higher than farm wages, the important thing is that the disparity has increased sharply in recent times, leaving the farmer less and less able to compete in the hiring of help.

The going daily wage rate on farms at present averages $2.85 a day for the Nation, the study found. Since farmers work 10 to 12 hours a day, and more in the busy season, the hourly rate amounts to only about 25 cents an hour.

It is only necessary to contrast this with an average rate of $1.18 paid an hour in shipbuilding as long ago as last August, 98 cents an hour in machine tools during the same period and $1.11 in aircraft, to perceive the farmers' plight.

The daily farm wage rates vary to a considerable extent by sections of the country. In general, the going rate is lowest in the South, highest along the East Coast and West Coast areas.

Following are the sectional results of the survey. It will be remembered that the South has about half of the Nation's farms:

	Average Daily Farm Wage Paid at Present
N. Eng. and M. Atl.	$4.00
East Central	3.00
West Central	3.75
South	2.00
Far West	4.50
Average, U. S.	2.85

The farmer's problem is increased by the fact that many industrial wages have risen in the last two years, thus widening the spread between farm and factory rates. For example, in the three industries cited above — shipbuilding, machine tools and aircraft—weekly earnings which averaged around $31 in 1939 had increased to more than $50 average by last August.

With present ceiling prices, many farmers say they cannot afford to increase farm wages in order to attract more help.

Four out of every 10 throughout the Nation believe the spread between their cost of production and the price which they receive for their product is not sufficient to permit the spending of more money for wages or other costs.

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX

No. 40

Basis Of Gain Or Loss II

The basis for determining gain or loss, for Federal income tax purposes, where the property exchanged had been acquired by the taxpayer in payment for services rendered, is the fair market value of the property at the date of receipt. This basis is then adjusted for capital items, such as depreciation and betterments in the case of real estate.

In the case of property acquired by gift, a distinction is made between property so acquired before January 1, 1921, and after December 31, 1920. For property acquired by gift or transfer in trust (except by devise or bequest) before January 1, 1921, the basis for determining either gain or loss is the fair market value at the time of the gift, or transfer in trust.

For property acquired by gift after December 31, 1920, the basis to be used depends upon whether a probable gain or a loss is involved. In determining a gain the basis is the same as it would be in the hands of the donor or the last preceding owner by whom it was not acquired by gift. Thus, if a taxpayer received a gift of property from his father in 1940, the basis would be the cost (or other basis) of the property to his father (assuming his father had bought it and had not himself received it as a gift), adjusted by capital items, such as depreciation and betterments applicable. If, however, his father had received it also as a gift, then the basis would be the cost (or other basis) to the last person by whom it was not acquired by gift, adjusted as described. (The "or other basis" mentioned in parentheses would apply to property acquired by the father by purchase prior to March 1, 1913, or by devise or bequest, or other means.)

In determining a loss on property acquired by gift after December 31, 1920, the basis is either the same as it would be in the hands of the donor or the last preceding owner by whom it was not acquired by gift, or the fair market value of the property at the time of the gift, whichever is lower.

In the case of property acquired by bequest, devise, or inheritance, the basis is the fair market value of the property at the time of such acquisition. The time of acquisition is the date of death of the decedent, even though legal title may not pass to the legatee until a later date. No distinction applies between property so acquired before January 1, 1921, and after December 31, 1920.

For property acquired after December 31, 1920, by any transfer in trust except as a gift by bequest or devise, the rule is that the basis for determining gain or loss is the same as it would be in the hands of the grantor, increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss recognized to the grantor upon such transfer under the law applicable to the year in which the transfer was made. The expression "increased," etc., applies to a transfer of property in trust for a valuable consideration.

In determining the basis in the case of securities of a corporation which have been acquired at various times and in various amounts, and which have been sold in various amounts and at various times, the general rule is that the securities sold (in the absence of identification of the particular securities sold) shall be charged against the earliest purchases of such securities.

To determine the basis of common stock received as a bonus with a purchase of preferred stock or bonds, the total purchase price shall be fairly apportioned between the common stock and the securities purchased.

Farm Credit And Its Cost

Toward Streamlining

A. G. Black, governor of the Farm Credit Administration, yesterday took by surprise the Joint Committee on Reduction of Non-essential Federal Expenditures by offering to submit to the committee a plan for "streamling" the Administration's myriad farm credit agencies to effect "very substantial savings" to the taxpayer.

Black, however, signally failed to convince Committee Chairman Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia and Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the Finance Committee, that revival of the Regional Agricultural Credit Corp., with lending capital of 225 million dollars, would either aid production of war foods or make available to the farmer credit unobtainable elsewhere.

Aided by Senator Wherry (Republican) of Nebraska, Byrd and George subjected Black and his deputy, J. E. Wells, jr., to extensive examination, particularly on the question of farmer demand for revival of RACC, originally an agency for making distress loans.

Black recalled that a request for financial assistance was made by farmers of the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia, a large vegetable-producing area. Wells remembered discussing arrangements for financing flax production with one Ole Olesen, a farmer of the Red River Valley section of North Dakota.

Black told the committee that he is responsible for administration of seven farm credit agencies out of 20 operated by the Government. He said administration of his agencies costs 40 million dollars a year.

Byrd declared the farm-credit system to be "entirely too costly, entirely too complicated" and involving "entirely too much overlapping" of Government operations. The Seator charged that addition of RACC to the Administration's accumulation of farm credit activities would encourage "crop speculators" to take out loans inasmuch as RACC plans to make some loans repayable only from proceeds of certain crops.

Capital Available

Remarking that, in addition to private banks making 80 per cent of all farm loans, the Government has a pool of 360 million dollars on which farmers may draw, Senator Wherry asked Black where he expected to find farmers to whom credit is still unavailable.

"I have no idea," said Black. "I don't know how many eligibles (persons eligible for farm loans) are left.

"There seems to be some indication that there will be additional tons of food produced this year if we make these loans."

George asserted that the net result of revival of RACC would be less, rather than more, farm production. Manpower and machinery shortages, he observed, are the real bottlenecks to food production. He reasoned that easy Federal loans would invite speculative farming which would draw manpower and machinery from more substantial farmers.

The 48-Hour Week

Reinforcing Wage Ceilings

High Administration officials view the President's order for a general 48-hour week as a means of reinforcing existing wage ceilings, it was learned yesterday.

Although the order was issued for the purpose of freeing additional manpower for the armed forces, war industry and the farms, the officials who helped to draft it were not unmindful of the significance of it as a means of relieving wage pressure on the War Labor Board.

Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes made this point in his radio address announcing the 48-hour week and his program of "no retreat" on the anti-inflation front, but the point was generally overlooked at the time.

Byrnes' Point

"In considering the ability of the wage earner to meet the increased cost of living," Byrnes said, "we cannot look simply at the basic hourly wage rates, even though such rates have risen far in excess of the increased cost of living. Men are working more than 40 hours per week. For the hours over 40, they are paid time and a half. The average weekly earnings of all factory workers (that is the amount a worker takes home in his pay envelope) have increased more than 40 per cent since January, 1941, and more than 60 per cent since September, 1939."

Byrnes' comments take on added significance since the War Labor Board has been revealing signs that it was shifting from its basic approach of considering only the basic hourly wage in applying its wage ceiling to also taking the "weekly take home" into account. If the 48-hour week is widely adopted by industries now on a basic 40-hour week, this development will be of great importance in holding to present wage ceilings.

Taylor's Opinion

In its decision turning down the request of 180,000 employes of the "Big Four" meat packing firms, the War Labor Board majority suggested that the packers who are operating a basic 40-hour week, "fully explore" the possibility of going on a longer work week.

"It need scarcely be pointed out that increased hours of work would not only tend to alleviate present manpower shortages, but would increase the weekly take-home of the employes," Dr. George W. Taylor, WLB vice chairman, said in a formal opinion.

The labor members of WLB dissented vigorously from Taylor's interpretation, but the industry members joined Taylor in a concurring opinion which incorporated a five-point manpower program to be used as a "test" before granting wage increases because of manpower requirements.

Anti-Labor Racketeering Measure Held Up

By the Associated Press

The House Rules Committee withheld approval yesterday of the bill by Representative Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama to subject labor unions to the Federal antiracketeering law and ordered further hearings next week.

The Judiciary Committee, which held hearings on a similar bill last year, reported the present measure this session without taking additional testimony. Chairman Sabath (Democrat) of Illinois, of the Rules Committee, said he would insist that A. F. L. and C. I. O. spokesmen he heard Tuesday. Sabath opposed the bill himself on the ground that it would "amount to rocking the boat when labor is doing a good job."

Representative Walter (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, of the Judiciary Committee suggested that the Hobbs bill be returned to that group pending a full study of labor legislation.

Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia demurred that the Judiciary Committee was a "graveyard" for labor legislation, and Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia observed that "sending it back to the Judiciary Committee would mean chloroforming it."

Walter conceded that "outrages" had been committed in many instances and said the heads of the unions were "the people who are most embarrassed" by them.

Labor, he added, is anxious to "clean its own house."

Ruthless Action Beats U-Boats, Says Ingram

With the United States Naval Forces in the South Atlantic, Feb. 19 (AP).—Rear Admiral Jonas H. Ingram, commander of Allied naval forces in the South Atlantic, said today that Allied shipping losses among convoys covered by his forces had been less than 1 per cent off the eastern coast of South America since the war began.

Ingram praised the efforts of all the forces in combatting submarines and said enemy action was being met by "persistent and ruthless action, and I mean ruthless."

Bill Would Enable Railway to Sue For Loss-Recovery

The House yesterday passed a bill which would empower the old Mount Vernon, Alexandria and Washington Railway to sue the Federal Government for recovery of losses sustained when its terminal and tracks were removed to make way for the Federal triangle.

The bill would empower the Court of Claims to hear the case. It was sent to the Senate for action.

The railway was built in 1894 and testimony before the House Claims Committee showed it transported 10,000 to 15,000 Virginia commuters daily.

When the triangle was started 10 years ago the terminal and tracks back of the old Postoffice Building were removed and no provision made to give the company another terminal in the District, testimony showed. This invalidated the remaining property of the company, which represented a cost of $690,000, the committee said.

The route of the old road was from its terminal to Fourteenth Street and across the Fourteenth Street Bridge.

Durable Goods Hours, Output Show Increase

Secretary of Labor Perkins reported yesterday that the actual work week in durable goods industries averaged 46.2 hours in December, which she interpreted as at least a 48-hour schedule.

"Because absenteeism and labor turnover probably account for a difference of two hours between the scheduled work week and the hours actually worked, industries reporting 46 hours are operating on a 48-hour schedule," she said.

The average is 8.7 per cent higher than a year ago. Of the durable goods industries which are engaged largely in war production, more than half reported 46 hours or more and three of these, machine tools, textile machinery and locomotives (tanks), exceeded 50 hours.

In nondurable goods, the work week in December averaged 42.1 hours, 6.4 per cent above last year and 1 per cent above November.

Hourly December earnings in durable goods, including overtime premiums and shift differentials, changed little from November, averaging 100.4 cents, or about 12 per cent above the earnings of the year earlier. In nondurable goods earnings rose to 76.2 cents, continuing the trend of about two-thirds of a cent advance per month which has prevailed since the spring of 1941.

In nonmanufacturing, coal mining (100.3 cents in anthracite and 108.5 cents in bituminous) and building construction ($1.23) average hourly earnings were 1 to 1½ per cent higher than in November.

Sale of Great Dams To States Proposed

The Federal Government would be required to sell Grand Coulee and Bonneville Dams to Washington State and Oregon under a bill introduced Thursday by Representative Norman (Republican), Washington.

Washington State would receive sovereignty over Grand Coulee and Washington and Oregon jointly sovereignty over the Bonneville project.

Gen. Old Gets Well-Traveled Pair of Stars

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, Feb. 19.—The most widely used pair of general's stars in this war theater was worn today by newly promoted Brig. Gen. William S. Old, of Uvalde, Tex.

The stars originally were sent to Brig. Gen. Clayton Bissell, commanding the Tenth Air Force in India and China, by his wife, whose home twon is Kane, Pa. She is now in Sewanee, Tenn.

Brig. Gen. John Magruder, then head of the American Military Mission in China, pinned the stars on Bissell.

Then Col. James H. Doolittle arrived in Chungking after bombing Tokyo, to find that he was a newly appointed brigadier general. So Bissell pinned the stars on Doolittle, who later was promoted to major general.

Doolittle encountered Claire L. Chennault, who had just been promoted to brigadier general. Since Doolittle was bound for home where stars were plentiful, he pinned his insignia on Chennault.

When Chennault got stars of his own, he returned them to Bissell.

Successively the stars were pinned on Caleb C. Haynes, commanding the India air task force; Robert C. Oliver of Maxwell Field, Ala., 40-year-old head of the air service command in India, and then on Old.

Taft Favors Shipping for Puerto Rico

By the Associated Press

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio declared yesterday that a 10-day investigation of conditions in Puerto Rico by a Senate subcommittee disclosed "confusion, overlapping and duplication" of governmental agencies, both Federal and insular.

He said in a statement that this condition, the people's poverty, and the "aggravation of food conditions and unemployment through the reduction in shipping" were the things that impressed the investigating Senators.

First member of the group to return to Washington, Taft expressed hope the committee could agree on steps to afford immediate relief, "such as an increase and regularization of shipping."

Long-range problems, he promised, will be given careful study by the committee.

Describing over-population as the "basic difficulty," the Ohioan said the people of Puerto Rico "are adopting a number of socialistic measures, some of which are necessary, but others threaten to aggravate their troubles rather than to assist them."

The submarine menace has disappeared "at least temporarily" from the Puerto Rican route, Taft found. He suggested that assignment of a definite number of ships to this service would relieve starvation, increase employment and "put the people of Puerto Rico on the same transportation basis as those of us who live in the United States.

"As American citizens," he added, "they are certainly entitled to that equality if we can furnish it."

Quota for Civilian Woolen Clothing Doubled by WPB

Lending emphasis to its repeated assertions that there is ample wool for civilian clothing, the War Production Board yesterday doubled the quota of wool allocated for the manufacture of civilian goods next fall and winter.

The action will make an additional 75 million pounds of wool available for consumer needs, and WPB asserted the new quota would make possible production of as much yardage as civilians received "in a normal peacetime year."

Any wool needed to meet the increased woolen and worsted production in excess of the large supplies on hand will be imported by manufacturers until the 1943 domestic wool clip becomes available, said Kenneth W. Marriner, chief of WPB's wool branch.

Already operating at a high rate, woolen and worsted mills were requested to boost their volume wherever possible to assure that the additional wool quotas will be used up.

Machinery For Red Cross Drive Started

Machinery for the American Red Cross' $1,555,400 campaign in the District from March 1 to April 1 was set in motion yesterday at a meeting of newspaper executives and representatives of public relations divisions of the armed forces at the Potomac Electric Power Co.

Brig. Gen. Robert L. Denig, director of public relations for the Marine Corps, read a story written by Sergt. Samuel Shaffer, 1709 H Street Northwest, Marine combat correspondent, from Guadalcanal telling of the activities of Thomas S. Montgomery, Red Cross field director from Yuma, Ariz., who got lost in the jungle on one of his trips to the front lines to distribute cigarettes.

Meeting a group of Marines, the 6 foot 8 inch "Tiny" asked: "Say, fellows, aren't we pretty close to the front lines now?"

"Front lines?" they echoed in astonishment. "They're half a mile behind us. This is a patrol."

Otto J. Lund, District Red Cross manager, outlined the local 1943 budget of $542,000, which he described as double the 1942 figure. Forty-one thousand volunteers last year contributed two million hours of work, he said.

Alfred G. Neal, general campaign chairman, emphasized that the campaign is "not a roll call, but a war fund, which accounts for the great increase in our financial needs."

Price Ceilings For Vegetables Planned by OPA

Prices of most fresh vegetables will be brought under control within two or three months, the Office of Price Administration announced yesterday.

This action, taken prior to the new crop harvest, "will leave fresh fish as the only important food group left with prices uncontrolled," it was stated.

Ceilings already have been placed on the prices of white potatoes and onions, as well as canned and dried vegetables. Such fresh vegetables as carrots, lettuce, sweet potatoes, cabbage, green beans, lima beans, tomatoes and peas will be affected by the new order, the OPA said.

Big Ten Head Blasts Opponents of Athletics

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ Eastern, Tech Battle Way Into Cage Final

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

It won't be baseball-as-usual, even if the big leagues operate next season. In fact, it threatens to be very unusual big league baseball, with what has been happening to the Yankees a prime example.

When Joe DiMaggio upped and enlisted in the Army the other day the oomph went out of the Yankees' outfield, for instance. When the 1943 season opens the Yankees will have an outfield comprised of Charley Keller, Roy Weatherly and Tuck Stainbach, which Yankee fans can't regard with any great ecstasy.

POVICH

Gone from the Yankee outfield, in addition to DiMaggio, are Tommy Henrich and George Selkirk, who beat DiMag into the service. Keller is the only remaining outfielder who answer the popular description of a Yankee outfielder. Stainbach couldn't play regularly for the Detroit Tigers, and when the Indians released Weatherly to the Yanks it was with some alacrity.

Like the other clubs, the Yankees are now forced to compromise with quality. Their first baseman will be Nick Etten, who graduated from the Phils, a diploma that was never highly respected. Frankie Crosetti, crowded to the bench by Phil Rizzuto during the past two seasons, gets back the shortstop job since Rizzuto joined the Navy.

The war has done a better job of balancing the American League than all the machinations of the club owners who were intent on breaking up the Yankees a few years ago. Not the team with the best athletes, but the club with the best 3-A ball players will win the pennant. And Uncle Sam will have the last word on lineup changes.

The effect of the war on baseball will be felt perhaps as long as a decade. It will have to be something of a fresh start for baseball after the war, inasmuch as no club will have any strangle-hold on young talent, and a good percentage of the present-day players will have reached the end of their careers.

Those ball players who go into the service may talk blithely of coming back to baseball after the war, but most of 'em can probably be counted out when peace comes. Army training is not conducive to good baseball. Baseball muscles, long and supple, become hard and knotty during war training, and interfere with the freedom of action that a big leaguer requires. Many a big league star is destined to find himself a minor leaguer after the war.

It may take baseball a few years to catch up to its pre-war quality after the peace. The few minor leagues that will continue in operation can't supply the demand for big leaguers, and the teen-old kids who normally would be playing the game are being deprived of their training grounds.

There will probably be a few years after the war when it will be a beautiful scramble by the big league clubs to assemble better teams, but eventually, of course, the smarter baseball men will have the smarter clubs. Organizations like the Yankees and the Cardinals and Tigers and Red Sox will again set up their far-flung farm systems and the material again will start to flow to the papa club, while the unsmart teams struggle along on their same catch-as-catch-can basis.

Incidentally, until a better outfielder comes along, Joe DiMaggio probably represented the greatest of his generation. If he wasn't properly appreciated it was because he lacked the color and flamboyancy of other big-shot stars, but among the ballplayers themselves DiMag was something out of this world as a big leaguer.

DiMaggio made the headlines exclusively because of what he did on the ball field. He didn't lend himself to color or human-interest stories. He was natively shy, and when he first came into the big leagues he was a bit awed. By the time he did become something of a personality as a great ball player, he had soured a bit on fans who had booed him for being a holdout and other fans who booed him for no greater crime than being of Italian parentage.

There may have been better hitters than DiMaggio, although he can stand on his record of hitting safely in 56 games, but we doubt if there ever was a superior outfielder. One estimate is that during his seven years of center fielding for the Yankees, only three balls were ever hit over his head. He could go back or come in for a ball with equal facility, and the ease of his manner of making a catch belied the tough chance that it was. He must have been a pretty good team player. In his seven years with the Yankees they won six pennants and five World Series.

Family Gives Pounds Florida Treatment at Marietta Park

Nothing Editor Forced to Surrender, But He Had Reason, We'll Admit

Marietta Park, D. C., Feb. 19.

Dear Boss,

I've been taking a lot of ribbing because you haven't sent me to Florida this winter. At the hockey game the other night, Benny Robinson looked through the ticket window and asked, "No Florida this year? Did the Boss finally catch up with you?" The vegetable man looks at me, smiles and says, "Oranges and grapefruit." With the boys in the sports department wisecracks on the subject are selling for a dime a furlong. I can't escape here in Marietta Park, either. Passed Mr. Marberry down our block this morning and he remarked, "The birds will be coming North soon." I got the hint.

HAIGHT

Well, I've taken it all good-naturedly. I haven't always felt jovial about these remarks but I've been accepting them without comment for the most part. However, there's a limit. A man don't have to take a verbal Florida spanking in his own home.

This morning for the 34th morning in a row my model son (Mt. McKinley model) appeared at the breakfast table with the same line—"When you leaving for Florida, Pop?" That wouldn't be so bad, Boss, but he waits about three beats and then adds a sarcastic "Ha, Ha."

Our darling daughter gets in a lick now and then with "Did you pick the oranges this morning, Pop?" Her mother doesn't add an audible jab, but she joins in the resultant laughter with a vigor that is more effective than words if you know what I mean.

I put my foot down this afternoon. I was sitting in front of my typewriter trying to make up my mind whether I'd write about I, myself Haight or Pounds, when our darling daughter came in from school and asked, "Pop, do you like those Florida grits?"

It was as good a time as any. We were all there, including Mary, the maid. "I don't want to hear the word 'Florida' again," I warned. "It was funny a month ago, but from now on I'm not going to laugh at any more of those wise cracks."

Well Boss, I didn't hear the word "Florida," but they kept it in front of me just as effectively as if I had a scratched phonograph record playing it in my head.

Our darling daughter asked mother if she could clean the electric icebox and then piled oranges, lemons and grapefruit on the end of the table where I was working. I felt like smiling but I had resolved to give them the ignore treatment. Mary came in with the vacuum cleaner and started pushing it around and my model son spoke up, "Sounds like an outboard motor, doesn't it, Mary?"

It wasn't hard for me to make the comparison. I didn't have to close my eyes to get a mental picture of a trim boat cutting through the lavender and blue waters of Biscayne Bay.

I'm not positive that Mother was being a party to the plot, but the way she turned the kitchen faucet on and off sounded mighty like the surf crashing and receding on Miami Beach. Especially when my model son was playing the "Moon Over Miami" record as a background.

I felt a smile coming, but I checked it. A real test came a moment later when our darling daughter strolled into our 65-degree living room "cooling" herself with a palm fan. My stomach was shaking as if I had swallowed a dozen lively balls, but somehow I managed to hold a straight face, three chins and all.

Well, Boss, Napoleon met his defeat at Waterloo, Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown and Haight surrendered at Marietta Park. I'll have to admit, too, it was an unconditional surrender.

It came this way: There was a period of silence, I was plugging away at my typewriter. I looked up. Propped up against the davenport was Buttercup, our pet hen. Her legs had been lengthened with stilts. She was covered with pink and black paper with a cardboard extension to her nose.

Just as my eyes settled on her, somebody yelled, "Look, Pop! A flamingo." As ever.

POUNDS HAIGHT.

Nats Will Place First-Game Tickets On Sale Tomorrow

The first robin isn't any farther north than Rocky Mount, N. C., but there is a definite sign that spring can't be so far away. Tickets for the opening game of the Nats go on sale tomorrow at 9 a. m. at Griffith Stadium. The 1943 Nats are scheduled to make their initial appearance on April 20. As usual, reservations can be made by mail, inclosing check or money order, to the Washington Baseball Club.

Schoolboy Title Game Set Tonight

Tide Tops Coolidge, 35-27; Harder Beats Roosevelt With Shot In Last 40 Seconds

By Bill Burnett

Post Staff Writer

Eastern and Tech used different processes to accomplish the same coveted end last night, the two long shots bursting into the final and championship game of the 1943 interhigh basketball season with exciting decisions over Coolidge and Roosevelt, respectively.

Urged on by a capacity crowd of 4000 boisterous fans, Eastern started the title tournament at Tech gym with a 35-27 routing of the Colts. The first period made most of the difference. In the finale, Tech came out ahead, 33-32, when Center Keith Harder rammed in a crazy one-handed shot with 40 seconds of play remaining.

Meet for Crown

Tonight the winners come to grips at Tech at 8:30 with the throne won by Wilson last year at stake. A preliminary will pit last night's losers, minus their senior players, at 7:30.

It was a perfect demonstration of tight basketball that Tech and Roosevelt put on. Never more than 4 points separated the teams and the lead changed hands a total of eight times. Tech led by 12-10 and 20-17 after the first two periods, then saw Roosevelt sweep into a lead it held until the final shot. After three periods the Riders were out front, 26-25.

They boosted that advantage to 3 points quickly, and alternate goals left them still out front, 32-29. One and a half minutes were left when Jim Kranking, smooth guard, cut the Trainers' deficit to a single point with a beautiful shot from mid court. Then it was Harder's turn.

Scooping up the ball from a scramble, the lanky newcomer leapt high, twisted and with his right hand flipped in the winning basket as he fell away from the goal. It was too late for Roosevelt to get another shot.

Charley Howard Stars

Despite that spectacular shot by Harder, the outstanding performance of the night was turned in by his rival at center, Charley Howard. Fifteen points fell to the husky veteran and his leadership of the Riders was sensational. His total was five points higher than Harder's.

Beaten decisively by the Colts in a previous clash, Eastern made short work of last night's engagement. In a little over one quarter it had amassed an 11-4 lead and that was good throughout. Fourteen points was the most separating the teams.

Billy Deck, floor leader, also topped the Tide's point-making with 15 points, five of them on his seven foul tosses. Freddy Seaton kicked in with 10 points to easily top any of the losers' scorers.

St. Alban's Five Beats Landon To Win Title

St. Alban's quint won the private school championship of the District yesterday on the St. Alban's court, defeating Landon, 32-14. Landon, which trailed by only two points, 14-12, at half time, could count only two points during the second half.

The victory was the tenth in 14 starts and the fifth triumph against two losses in Interstate Academic Conference play. Elliott was outstanding for St. Alban's with 13 points. Devereux was best for Landon with three field goals.

Jockey Haas Hurt in Tumble At New Orleans

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Feb. 19.—Jockey Leon Haas suffered a broken collar bone and the Greentree stable's 6-year-old gelding, Gramps, was fatally hurt today in a spectacular spill that marked the seventh race at the Fair Grounds.

The field was passing the stands for the first time in the mile and 70-yard race when Gramps, with no other horse bothering him, buckled and tossed Haas over his head. Haas got up and walked off the track before collapsing. Later, a physician said his left collar bone was fractured and it would be four to six weeks before he could ride again.

Gramps, with a broken leg, was helped off the track before the finish of the race and died of hemorrhage. Agricole, paying $34.40, was the winner.

The gelding, now running as a $1750 plater, won a rich Westchester Handicap at Empire City a few seasons ago when running for John Hay Whitney.

At least a dozen men helped to drag Gramps over to the outside rail while the other horses were racing around the oval, so that the track would be clear for the finish. Haas started to his feet when the field had passed by, but soon sank down and was carried off the track to await the ambulance.

Wankowicz And Celinski Win in A.A.U.

With favorites winning only after hard tests, the District A. A. A. boxing tournament sped into the semifinal round last night at Turner's Arena before 1000 spectators.

Al Wankowicz, Golden Glove 147-pound hampion and a favorite for top honors, turned back determined Edsel Martz, Washington Boys Club, novice 160-pound Golden Glove winner last year, after a stirring scrap. Pete Celinski, another Golden Glove champion, had to go at top speed to defeat Dominic Marvasco of Washington Boys Club, in the 135-pound class.

The summaries:

NOVICE CLASS

126-pound class—Charley Pell (W. B. C.) decisioned William Hodges (P. B. C.).

135-pound class—Marvin Bailey (St. Mary's) decisioned Milton Corman (P. B. C.). Phil Hutton (W. B. C.) decisioned Tom Houston (unattached).

Bay Meadows Starts 25-Day Meeting Today

By the Associated Press

San Mateo, Calif., Feb. 19.—Bay Meadows turns back the horse-racing calendar 40 years or so tomorrow in an effort to conduct a 25-day or more meeting without such auxiliaries as auto, bus and train transportation.

The horse-and-buggy era is being revived, literally, to cope with wartime restrictions. Every type of horse-drawn vehicle will be used to haul patrons from the terminus of the San Francisco-San Mateo interurban streetcar to the track, slightly more than a mile and a half away.

Rubber Administrator W. M. Jeffers frowned on the use of automobiles to reach the track. Consequently, all the parking areas will be closed. Trains running past the front door will not stop at the track's station. The railroad, in fact, ran newspaper advertisements asking horse players not to use its facilities.

The State Racing Board, through Chairman Jerry Giesler, telegraphed William Soule, city manager of San Mateo, suggesting that autos, aside from those owned locally, be prohibited from parking within a mile of the track.

Soule agreed to post warning signs. He failed to specify how the edict would be enformed. Capt. R. S. Cassell said the regulation had no legal status on the State highways.

Giesler himself visited the track today. He rode the street car from San Francisco.

Little Hoyas Win Second, Defeat W.-L.

It's second victory in 17 starts this year was credited to Georgetown Prep five yesterday as it defeated Washington-Lee High in a 41-39 overtime game at G. U. Prep. A fast break and setup by Dick Nicolaides, his only points of the game, provided the winning margin after two and a half minutes of the extra session.

The hosts, after trailing 20-19 at intermission, appeared a certain loser when they scored only one point to the invaders' 12 in the third quarter. A torrid rally put Prep back in contention and Johnny Healy finally tied the count at 39 all with two minutes of action left.

Again it was Bob Phillips, W.-L. forward, who starred despite his team's loss. He rolled in 17 points while Prep's best scorers were Healy with 12, and Jim O'Donnell and Ted Bourg with 10 each.

Wilson Loses Tough Battle To Robinson

16,336 See Harlem Hammer Go All-Out To Take 10-Rounder; Floors Foe Once

By Sid Feder

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Feb. 19.—Sugar Ray Robinson started up the comeback trail toward avenging the only defeat of his career by outpointing California Jackie Wilson tonight in 10 rounds of "block-buster" belting in Madison Square Garden. Robinson scaled 142½; Wilson 142¼.

Making his first start since Jake Lamotta snapped his all-conquering string of 129 straight triumphs as an amateur and pro in Detroit a couple of weeks ago, the skinny Harlem Hammer turned loose the most explosive dynamite of his career. Yet, though he floored the California boxing expert in the fourth round and staggered him at least two other times during the fight, Ray couldn't apply the crusher.

And, although he had Wilson in trouble on at least three occasions, he had to go all out to grab the decision against the edge Wilson piled up on the infighting and with occasional long, hard hooks. At the finish, the Associated Press score card gave Robinson five rounds, Wilson four and called one even.

A crowd of 16,336 turned out to contribute to a gross gate of $47,683 for the show, from which the National Infantile Paralysis Fund received a share of the proceeds, estimated at $4500.

Even on the official ballots the decision was split, with Referee Frank Fullam and Judge Bill Healey voting for Robinson and Judge George Kelly calling it a draw.

However, that Wilson was still around at the finish of the 10 heats was a major accomplishment in itself. The way Robinson started off, obviously trying for a quick knockout and punching California Jackie, who is now an Army sergeant, all around the premises, you wouldn't have given a lead two-bit piece for Wilson's chances of going the route.

But Wilson weathered the storm and its attendant thunder and lightning and started to take the play away in the third, pounding Ray's mid-section with right-hand shots as he dug in close and pushed the Sugar Man around.

In the fourth, however, Wilson made the mistake of trying to open up at long range, and Ray touched off the fuse again. He hit Wilson with everything but the referee and the first thing Jackie knew he was on the deck from a right-hand and taking a nine-count and when he staggered to his feet, he was greeted by a lot more of the same. Robinson threw so many punches, that through the fifth heat he appeared to have punched himself out.

Then, starting with the sixth, Jackie swept three rounds, became the aggressor, and gave Ray's range in the ninth and Robinson came home winging.

From here, Ray heads back to Detroit to take on Lamotta again And from the bombs he was tossing around tonight, Jake better be extra good that night.

G. W. Defeats Fairfax to Win Northern Title

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Feb. 19.—George Washington Presidents clinched the northern Virginia mythical cage championship today, easily defeating Fairfax High Rebels, 47-19, before a near capacity crowd in the Presidents' gymnasium.

A newcomer, Bobbie Roland, playing at forward, was the star of the Presidents' attack, and sank six field goals, to top the scorers, while Joe Hensley, the hot-handed man of the metropolitan area, came next with 11 points.

The Presidents were off to an 18-0 lead at the first quarter, and at the half held the upper hand, 22-9. This margin they increased to 32-15 at the third quarter.

This was the fifteenth consecutive victory for the Presiderts and their seventeenth in 18 games.

Presidents Of Colleges Are Targets

Maj. John Griffith Charges Arguments Against Collegiate Sports Are Unclear

By International News Service

Chicago, Feb. 19.—A group of college presidents "who don't like athletics" advised Army officials to prohibit men returning to colleges and universities for special training to participate in intercollegiate athletics, Maj. John L. Griffith declared today.

Major Griffith, commissioner of athletics for the Western Conference, stated:

"These college presidents present arguments against intercollegiate athletics which are unclear.

"For instance, they refer to a transportation problem. Recently two of our Big Ten teams played a basketball game on a night when the temperature stood at zero. There were 14,000 spectators there, and most of them walked to the fieldhouse.

"What is there wrong with these people going out to watch two teams of boys perform? What is there wrong in these boys playing?

Recalling that Brig. Gen. Joe N. Dalton, assistant chief of staff for personnel, services of supply, announced that "we are not sending these men there (to colleges and universities for the special training) to participate in big-time college athletics." Major Griffith said that it has been his experience that on all college faculties there are some professors who favor athletics, some who dislike intercollegiate sports, and some who are indifferent.

"It's the same way in the Army and Navy," Major Griffith said. "Many don't like college athletics but there are many others . . . who have seen fit to commend competitive sport for the role it plays as a superconditioner of men for battle."

Bridgewater Beaten, 47-31, By Gallaudet

Operating smoothly behind the swift scoring of Sharpshooters Baldridge and Holcomb, Gallaudet's Blues turned back Bridgewater, 47-31, in the Gallaudet gym last night in a Mason-Dixon Conference game.

The Blues, paced by Baldridge's 16 points, quickly found the range and within a few minutes held a comfortable lead. A Bridgewater time-out halted the rain of baskets momentarily, but the Blues were soon at it again and when halftime was reached, held 30-15 margin.

In the second half, after some neat scoring by Baldridge, Holcomb and Padden which ran the score to 37-18, Gallaudet Coach Sullivan sent in his reserves, using his second and third strings most of the way.

Georgetown to Meet Maryland Five Tonight

Mahuken, Kostecka in Final Game; Terps Mittmen to Meet North Carolina

John Mahnken and Andy Kostecka, who have accounted for 525 points in Georgetown's 14 basketball victories to date, will make their last local appearance tonight when the Hoyas meet Maryland in the feature attraction of a sports double-bill at Ritchie Coliseum. Maryland will box North Carolina immediately following the 8 o'clock ball game.

Despite travel restrictions a capacity crowd of 4600 is expected to see what has been called Georgetown's greatest court combination in its farewell home appearance before Army orders take Kostecka and Mahnken to Camp Lee next week.

A victory is doubly important to the Hoyas tonight as they hope to take a six-game winning streak to New York Monday night where they meet St. John's in Madison Square Garden. The Hoyas have won five in a row and 14 in 16 starts, losing only to Temple and North Carolina Naval Training Station. Syracuse, Fordham and Penn State were the Hoyas' latest victims.

The Georgetown squad, with which Coach Elmer Ripley had hoped to take Eastern and possibly National honors, will have only Danny Kraus, the southpaw All-American candidate, left of the big three players after Monday.

The Hoyas will not meet any set-up tonight as the Old Liners have won three in a row and only one of their six defeats this season has been by more than three points. In Ernie Travis and Tommy Mont Coach Burt Shipley has two point producers who have matched the fancy averages of Mahnken and Kostecka.

Boxers Called

Maryland's ring team will meet an old ring rival in the Tarheels, who beat V. P. I. last week and lost to Virginia by 4½-3½ while Virginia beat the Terps, 5-3.

Coach Tom Campagna's 165- and 175-pound Maryland ring veterans, Johnny Gilmore and Herb Gunther, have been called to the Army and they have been replaced by Ed Reider and Ray Ciccone. Otherwise the Terp lineup will be 120—Ray Bradshaw; 127—Bill Kambouris; 135—Joe Rogers, a District resident; 145—Tommy Jones; 155—Alex Bobenko, and Leonard Rodman, heavyweight. Maryland's boxers have beaten Coast Guard, Western Maryland, Army and Catholic U. and lost only to Virginia.

Georgetown's court teams hold a 5-3 edge in the modern rivalry with Maryland, losing 51-42 in an upset last year in Riverside Stadium. Coach Shipley's squad will be at its physical peak tonight for one of the few times this season and only the lack of a big man to stop Mahnken causes pessimism in the Maryland camp.

For the last time locally the team which G. U. coach had in mind for years will line up with Mahnken at center, the eagle-eyed Kostecka and Lloyd Potpiocchio at forward and Kraus, superman of the court, and his running mate, Billy Hassett, the surprise package of the G. U. team, at guard.

American U. Host To Swarthmore

American University's redhot scoring duo of Bart Fugler and George Zuras will pick on a little tougher opposition tonight in Swarthmore College on the A. U. court at 8:15 o'clock.

Fugler scored 35 points and Zuras 28 Thursday night to boost their averages nearer the 20-per-game mark.

Eastern Table Tennis Event Starts Today

Interest was heightened in the Eastern table tennis tournament starting tonight at the Columbia Courts at 6 o'clock by the reinstatement by the D. C. T. T. A. of Stanley Fields, formerly local champion and high ranking nationally in paddle circles, so that he could enter the event. Fields has been out of competition for over a year.

Barbara Cannon, Toledo, Ohio, who is ranked No. 6 nationally, is entered with her family, including her mother, father and a sister. Miss Cannon will undoubtedly meet Washington's own Carolyn Wilson in the semifinals to earn the right to play against Mae Clouther, Arlington, Mass., who is ranked No. 2 in the country and seeded No. 1 in the Eastern.

Wills to Enter Ring With Norman Slight Favorite

Frankie Wills, Washington welterweight champion, may find himself no better than a 6-5 favorite to defeat Phil Norman, Detroit Negro battler, in their feature ten-round bout Monday night at Turner's Arena.

Norman, who has fought such fighters as Rueben Shank, Billy Grany, Irish Eddie Pierce, Francesco Montanari, Milo Theodorescue, Rocky Luciano, Billy Corrigan, Mike Piskin and Vic Dellicurti, drilled with California Jackie Wilson for his match with Ray Robinson last night in Madison Square Garden.

Stoney Lewis, local middleweight, and Nick Kirsh of Baltimore, clash in the eight-round semiwindup. Oscar Wright, District lightweight, opposes Taffy Cummings, of the Royal British Navy, in an eight, while Leon Kennedy will meet Lee Rosan in a six.

Capital Sales Soar 63% on Buying Spree

By S. Oliver Goodman

In the general buying spree that followed shoe rationing Washington department store sales soared 63 per cent for the week ended February 13. This was revealed last night in the weekly retail report of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

The shopping rush was not confined to Washington. Baltimore sales in the same week jumped 71 per cent as compared with the same period last year, while the Fifth Federal Reserve District as a whole experienced a 68 per cent increase.

Declining stocks sent retailers into wholesale markets to speed deliveries and obtain more goods, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., but reorders were reported increasingly difficult to secure in desired quantities.

Abatement Noted

Some abatement of the heavy buying followed announcement of the Office of Price Administration that clothes rationing "definitely is not planned for the present." Before Congress this week were Donald M. Nelson, War Production Board chairman, indicated that clothes rationing might not be necessary at all.

Local retailers pointed to a survey in the apparel trade by the New York Times which disclosed that "all talk of clothing rationing was absurd and there would be an abundance of material available for civilian use next fall." Growers, weavers and retailers were covered in the canvass. Spokesmen for the various branches of the industry said they expected Government demand for cloth and clothing would drop at least 30 per cent during March and April.

In the four weeks ended February 13 local department store sales were 18 per cent heavier than in the same period last year. The gain for the entire Reserve district was 20 per cent.

A Nation-wide Spree

All sections of the country shared in the buying boom last week. The Federal Reserve Board reported that store sales in the week ended February 13 were 45 per cent higher than in the corresponding week last year. Gains by Federal Reserve districts were reported as follows:

Dallas, 107 per cent; Kansas City, 85; St. Louis, 58; San Francisco, 57; Atlanta, 53; Cleveland, 49; Chicago 45; Boston, 30; Philadelphia, 23, and New York, 22 per cent.

Dun & Bradstreet said yesterday that the buying rush tapered off somewhat this week.

"While demand was persistent at a very lively pace," the report noted, "retailers remarked on a change in consumer attitude. Buyers exercised more care and selectivity in purchasing in contrast with the frantic grabbing noted on some selling days last week."

New Drive Planned To Sell War Bonds

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 19.—The U. S. War Savings Staff announced today a new campaign to sell war bonds and stamps through newspaper advertising space contributed by leading industries and firms.

A test campaign will be launched in New York City about March 15, Nevil Ford, New York State Administrator of the Treasury Savings Staff, said.

Ford said he hoped to place 1000-line advertisements twice a week in each of the eight New York dailies cooperating in the drive and predicted the campaign might develop a maximum of three such advertisements in each paper weekly.

Staffed with experienced advertising men, a new unit under the name War Bond Advertising Representatives of New York has been set up to handle the pledges of the business firms cooperating.

Saga of George M. Cohan Again Pleases at Earle

By Ernest L. Schier

"YANKEE DOODLE DANDY." A Warner Brothers picturization of an original screen play based on the story of George M. Cohan, starring James Cagney with Joan Leslie, Walter Huston, Richard Whorf, Irene Manning, George Tobias, Rosemary DeCamp, Jeanne Cagney, Frances Langford, George Barbier, S. Z. Sakall, Walter Catlett, Douglas Croft, Eddie Foy, jr., Minor Watson, Chester Clute, Odette Myrtil and Patsy Lee Parsons. Directed by Michael Curtiz. At Warner Brothers Earle Theater.

"Yankee Doodle Dandy" returned yesterday to the Earle Theater at popular prices just five months and one week after its limited road show engagement, where an overflow house, many of whom were viewing the outstanding musical film of the year for a second time, gave loud and frequently spontaneous outbursts of their approval.

Calculated to arouse the patriotic fervor of any American, "Yankee Doodle Dandy" is truly a wartime inspiration. Based on the life of the late George M. Cohan, the theater's immortal actor, director, author and composer, the film embodies an engrossing biography as well as a perfect blending of music and choreography that maintains a high pitch for more than two hours; a screen accomplishment which will stand out for many years to come.

It would be difficult to describe the attributes of "Yankee Doodle Dandy" without adding further adjectives to the already overflowing list of panegyrics heaped upon the production. Because of the nature of the story the usual element of surprise is lacking. But Robert Buckner and Edward Joseph, the scenario writers, have used the technique of narrating the film in retrospect so effectively that the film contains a terrific amount of punch both at the end and the beginning which is equally matched throughout by the fascinating tale of Cohan's career.

In the short space of 120 minutes, the film embodies a panorama of warmth, music and romance which characterized the career of a well-loved gentleman whose life was dedicated to the fundamental principles of democracy. Called by some who envied his success a "flag waver," Cohan brought entertainment to millions who gratefully acknowledged his joyous reminders of the freedom Americans enjoy.

The picture opens with George M. Cohan nervously making his way up Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House whence he has been summoned by Executive Order. The occasion takes place during the run of the Kaufman-Hart musical "I'd Rather Be Right" in which he has been impersonating the President. Cordially greeted by the President, Cohan's fears are dispelled and the conversation between the two fades back to the main body of the picture which describes the outstanding events in the lengthy career of the Four Cohans.

To this writer the events pictured carry no personal nostalgia, yet no one, no matter how anciently historical the sequences may be, can resist the tremendous emotional power the film carries. To each, according to his tastes, there is entertainment fare here to satisfy. Contemporaries of Cohan will enjoy the memories of an era which contained so much charm and vibrancy while every one, without exception, will tingle to the words and music of "Over There" and "It's a Grand Old Flag."

One outstanding impression which is gotten from viewing the film for the second time is the unqualified, uniformly superb portrayals, by the cast. James Cagney tops absolutely anything else he has ever done on the screen. Rather than attempt an imitation of Cohan, Cagney has taken some of the former's outstanding physical characteristics and blended them with his own inner interpretations to form a life-like and convincing portrait of the man. Cagney's adeptness at singing and dancing will be a revelation to those who are unaware that he started his theatrical career as a "hoofer."

The balance of the Four Cohans are played by Walter Huston, as Jerry; Rosemary DeCamp as Nellie, and Jeanne Cagney, as Josephine. Their relationships to one another are warm and realistic. Huston especially, a former vaudevillian, is in his element as a song and dance man. Joan Leslie is sweet and gracious as the "Mary" who stole George's heart and inspired him to write the song of that name whose popularity still exists. There are other excellent performances by Richard Whorf, Irene Manning, S. Z. Sakall, Frances Langford and many others. The direction and photography match the high quality of the performers and complete a notable production in the history of Hollywood.

The stage show is somewhat short this week due to the length of the film, but provides a pleasant interlude. Two energetic numbers by the Roxyettes are balanced by the dancing of the D'Ivons, a graceful team of ballroom artists whose routines are fresh and lovely, and the Oxford Boys with their unique imitations of various top-notch bands.

Shortage of Child Wonders Leaves Hollywood Wondering

By Melrose Gower

Hollywood, Feb. 19.—There's a current inexplicable shortage in this land of kiss and make-up.

'Tis the woeful lack of child players who, only a few years back, were as thick on the streets of Hollywood as P-38's in the skies today.

At this point the writer pauses to utter a wild yell to mothers not to bring their hopefuls to Hollywood. The movies will do their own seeking, thank you, one and all.

Thousands of children have been tested for screen roles during the past three years. Yet the discouraging records reveal in that time the discovery of only five youngsters who have hit the top and apparently will stay there until addled by adolescence—five youngsters to replace a small army of former child stars.

Every film fan knows the transformation that has befallen Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Deanna Durbin, Bonita Granville, Virginia Weidler, Jackie Cooper, Jane Withers— all personable young adult players now. Shirley Temple? She's a curvaceous young radio star, more than 5 feet tall, weight 103 pounds.

Fighting Another Fight

Freddie Bartholomew, Frankie Thomas, Jimmy Lydon and the Mauch twins, Bobby and Billy, no longer are fighting for fat film fees. They're in uniform, fighting the Hun and the heathen. Dickie Jones that has just changed his name to the more virile sounding Richard Jones for a coming picture. Of the four popular Watson boys, Harry now is 19, Billy only two years younger.

And the little girl player who was Joan Brodel, today is lovely Joan Leslie, Fred Astaire's dancing partner in R. K. O.-Radio's "The Sky's the Limit."

Of course it must be admitted that many of the "veterans" still are doing right well for themselves before the cameras; such children, among others, as Darryl Hickman, Patsy Lee Parsons, Douglas Croft, Bobs and Delmar Watson. Also there are some half a dozen recent child discoveries of whom much is expected, but whose future worth still is problematical.

Your correspondent can recall, however, only five child players entering the cinema scene since 1939 who have attained high success. They are Joan Carroll, Freddie Mercer, Johnny Sheffield, Roddy McDowell and Peggy Ann Garner. Liens on the services of the first three are held by R. K. O. Radio, on the two others by Twentieth Century-Fox.

Still a "Show Stopper"

Joan Carroll, 11-year-old moppet from Elizabeth, N. J., who first won recognition as Ginger Rogers' brat sister in "Primrose Path," is listed in the Motion Picture Almanac as "the only screen child to be called from Hollywood to be given a leading role in a Broadway musical." The musical was "Panama Hattie," and little Joan just about stopped the show. At this writing the talented youngster is working with Ruth Warrick and Walter Reed in R. K. O.-Radio's "Petticoat Larceny," a screen story written to order around the madcap adventures of a child radio star.

Are Firmly Entrenched

Johnny Sheffield broke into films in "Tarzan Finds a Son." That was three years ago. Today Johnny is still the offspring of Jungle Lord Johnny Weissmuller in "Tarzan Triumphs which Sol Lesser recently produced.

Roddy McDowall is firmly entrenched, this 13-year-old Londonborn lad currently being starred in "My Friend Flicka." And the same can be said of Peggy Ann Garner, 9, Hollywood's greatest commuter, now playing Joan Fontaine as a child in "Jane Eyre." Between pictures, Peggy Ann lives with her parents in Baltimore.

Two possible child stars of the future simply must be mentioned here, Billy Severn and his kid brother. Metro has an honest right to consider their names important —because:

Their real names are William Churchill Roosevelt Severn and Winston Franklin McArthur Severn!

Doodle Dandy Disembarks at the Earle

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Gazette

New York, Feb. 19.

VOTES: Two of the guests at a recent Washington party were Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and Attorney General Robert W. Kenny of California, who was the only New Dealer elected on the State ticket . . . Kenny made a speech, explaining his election, and then said: "It's the votes that count. And if a candidate can't can't get 'em, change candidates." The other speakers repeated this theme . . . Justice Douglas, whose dissents from the Court's majority opinions are in the Holmes-Brandeis pattern, then made his speech. "On the Supreme Court bench, it's the votes that count, too—five votes," he stated. "But if we can't get the votes, then we have to wait until the voters change, before we're proven right."

WILLIAM O. DOUGLAS

WEALTH: At yesterday's rehearsals for the radio show, "What's My Name?" Arlene Francis invited some passing soldiers to participate. One of these was Corporal O'Daniel, son of the Texas Senator. The young soldier quickly and correctly answered the first question—concerning Gypsy Rose Lee—and won $25 . . . "Corporal," Miss Francis asked him, "what would your father do if he made money so quickly and so easily?" . . . "In that case," replied O'Daniel, "he'd be warmin' his britches before a Senatorial Investigating Committee."

MUSIC: Artur Rubinstein, the pianist, was asked whether he ever had performed with Toscanini. "No. Never," he replied "And that never could happen." . . . "But why not?" the pianist was asked . . . "Toscanini is an autocrat," he explained. "And—er—and so am I."

FAME: Ben Hecht was reminiscing of the Barrymores—of the Christmas night when he and Eddie Sutherland induced John Barrymore to leave Elaine Barrie and join them in the snow—and of the days when Ethel, John and Lionel appeared in the movie, "Rasputin" . . . Hecht's collaborator, Charles MacArthur, phoned him from Hollywood, late one night, and asked: "What do you think of Stanislavski as a director? . . . Stanislavski is one of the greatest directors in the world," Hecht assured . . . "That's all I have to know," said MacArthur, who is easily confused by Russian names. and the next day, on his recommendation. Richard Boleslewski was signed to direct "Rasputin."

EXCUSE: H. L. Mencken told George Jessel that he'd come to see Jessel in "Show Time," but on condition that George wouldn't introduce him. "No actor," Jessel reminded him, "ever wants to call an audience's attention to someone more famous than he is" . . . Jessel, incidentally, had a wisdom tooth extracted yesterday. While he was in the chair he wanted to show the nurse that the pain wasn't bothering him. "Look, Caruso," said George, and sang an aria, impersonating the tenor. "Look. Sir Harry Lauder," Jessel continued and impersonated the Scotch comedian . . . Jessel then started to rise from the chair, cockily, and fell down. And as he was falling, the quick-thinking vaudevillian told the nurse: "Look. Leon Errol."

CHATTER: Roy Downes, the Congressman who was defeated for reelection by Clare Boothe, is expected to be named as Assistant Secretary of Labor next week . . . Miss Boothe will be the target of an American Labor Party broadside on Friday, when the gubernatorial candidate, Dean Alfange, will make a radio address on the subject of her speech

The Children's Hour!

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 19.—Charles Brackett is writing the girl's part in "The Uninvited" for Ida Lupino, at her request. Which means there's a deal cooking with Warners. If it goes through, Ray Milland will play opposite her . . . George Montgomery, who's gone through our list of stars like a brush fire, now wants to meet Joan Leslie . . . George Abbott paging Bonita Granville for his new play, "Kiss and Tell." Bonita wants to, but R. K. O. has a prior claim on her. She's hoping she can work out a deal when she comes back from her personal appearance tour with "Hitler's Children" . . . Those communistic directors who talk openly on the sets at various studios had better pipe down. They've been reported to the FBI—and about time . . . Just learned why the Greer Garson and Richard Ney wedding didn't go through. Gosh! I don't blame her.

IDA LUPINO

Universal Follows Through

Children on the upbeat at Universal. Since Deanna Durbin and Gloria Jean made so much money for them, Henry Koster has little Ann Blyth, aged 10, who was so good in "Watch on the Rhine." She'll have a leading role in "100 Girls and a Man." . And while talking to her he discovered she could also sing . . . Betty Grable was immortalized in cement at Grauman's Chinese. She rose above those stars who only got their footprints in. An imprint of Betty's leg was done, which will go nicely with Bob Hope's nose and Jack Barrymore's profile . . . Robert Taylor was inducted in the Navy one day and then next day got a deferment to make another picture. This time it's "Russia" . . . Ingrid Bergman brought a gift for Gary Cooper—a can of rattlesnake meat . . . Dorothy McGuire arrived in town one day, left the next for a two weeks' vacation, destination unknown.

Sight of the Week

Charlie Chaplin, in a pair of shorts and sweatshirt, feeding chickens in his back yard. He tells me his new picture's nearly finished: I said, "You told me that a year ago." "Oh, but this is a different story," said he . . . Trudy Erwin used to sing in Bing Crosby's chorus. When Ginny Simms left Kay Kyser, Kay took her on and trained her as soloist. After two years she goes back to Bing as a star . . . My pal and former announcer, Art Baker, introduced a wonderful song at the Hollywood canteen Thursday night, where he does a community sing with the soldiers. It's called "We'll Knock the Hell Out of Hitler," written by Clyde Payne and Wayne Allen. It's a humdinger and will probably be used from now on as a marching song . . . Irving Berlin had word from Gen. Ben Lear saying his troops were marching to "This Is the Army, Mr. Jones." In fact, they've adopted it as their own.

Reunion Rehearsal

Our photographers had themselves a time at the Mocambo shooting Lana Turner and Steve Crane from all angles. But they weren't putting on those love scenes for the boys. They were already in the midst of them when the snapshot men arrived. When I asked Lana how come—were they going to remarry, she replied, "How can I tell, when I don't know myself?" Steve, who's in 3A, is taking all kinds of shots and vitamin pills to get in the Army.

Now Is the Time

That conference between Sam Goldwyn, Orson Welles, David Selznick, and William Paley should bring some mighty fine entertainment to our town. Wish that quartet would begin planning postwar pictures to show the rest of the world what we mean by democracy, and why we keep right on fighting for it. . . When Johnny McLain, war hero, ran into Kay Francis in London, she said, "If you reach Hollywood before I do, use my house." He's using it—can't you just see him propped up on her pillows? The town's giving him parties. The most envied girl in these parts is Kay Aldrige, his constant companion. She takes off for New York for "Dancing in the Streets."

Returns to First Love

When Rex Ingram finishes in "Sahara," he intends to resume his study of medicine. Wants to become a practicing physician. "With so much suffering and the need for doctors so great, I feel I can do more good as a doctor than as an actor," says he. . . . Helen Craig, star of "Johnny Belinda" in New York, is being given a buildup by Hal Wallis. Her first picture will be "Saratoga Trunk." . . . George Bruce, who wrote "Ferry Command," will don his flying suit and ham it up when they make the picture. Says this is the first chance he's had to write himself into a plot.

Family Party

Edward Lasker celebrated part of his 24 hours' leave with Helene Reynolds, who was made up for "The Song of Bernadette." Claudette Colbert took time off to throw a strictly family birthday party for her husband, Lieut. Comdr. Joel Pressman. . . . Freddie Rich and his band, on their way back from New York, will play three Army camps. . . . Kitty Carlisle, wearing a patch over one eye, twirling contentedly with Arthur Lyons.

Wears Queer Garb

Claudette Colbert, a best dressed star, wears a skirt made out of a Pullman blanket for a comedy scene in "The Palm Beach Story," in which she stars with Joel McCrea.

Metropolitan

"Commandos Strike at Dawn," one of the most realistic action films of the war, is heading into its fourth straight week at the Metropolitan Theater, after a week's run at the Earle.

Paul Muni is the star of the grim picture which depicts the horror and barbarism suffered and fought against by the people of Norway since that unfortunate country's demise to the Nazis' traitor-abetted invasion.

Adapted for the screen from a novel by C. S. Forester, the British author of sea stories, the most stark scene in the whole epic shows the punishment of a would-be small-time Quisling at sea—symbolic, perhaps, of the fate of those who now betray the conquered countries—during the escape in a fishing smack from Norway to England.

A fine performance is contributed by Lillian Gish, who reveals her Aryan-worshiping husband as an informer for the Nazis, along with the able acting of Anna Lee, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Robert Coote, Alexander Knox, Rosemary de Camp and Elizabeth Fraser.

Glamorous Star In New Type Role

Ellen Drew, who has been a glamorous beauty in 14 films, dressed in all the latest fashions, does a topsy-turvy in her newest role.

Ellen wears a soiled mufti outfit all during her characterizations of a Red Cross nurse in "Night Plane From Chungking." But her appearance only adds to her attractions in the eyes of Robert Preston, who plays the role of an American pilot. He falls in love with her.

The Federal Diary

Editor's note: Today and every Saturday this column is written by Federal workers. Send your views and comments to Jerry Kluttz, editor.

I'm being inducted in the Army within a few days and I have only one real regret; I have no assurance whatsoever that I'll have a job awaiting me in the Federal service after the war is over despite the fact that I've spent the past eight years in the Government and during that time I've turned down a number of offers from private industry on the theory that my Federal job was "safe."

I don't expect special consideration nor do I demand privileges not extended to others but I do believe that the hundreds of "war service appointees" who, like myself, are being inducted into the armed forces would be greatly relieved if President Roosevelt or Congress, without further delay, would guarantee us jobs when we return. The Government worker with a permanent Civil Service status apparently has nothing to worry about. He seems to be protected fully by the Selective Service Act.

But I had the misfortune to work in an emergency agency where most of the employes didn't have Civil Service status. I was one of them. Last summer I transferred to one of the new war agencies and I was given an appointment for the duration of the war and six months thereafter. A score of my friends with "war service appointments" have entered the armed forces with the cloud of future job uncertainty hanging over their heads.

I decided to find out my reemployment rights. I wasn't thinking only of myself but of my buddies who had gone before me and the many others who will follow. I talked with officials in my own agency, Civil Service Commission and members of Congress. At not a single place was I given any encouragement. I wanted to hear these words: "You have absolutely nothing to worry about, when the war is over we'll have a job here for you."

Instead, I was told that if my job was still in existence when I returned and if I did this and that that I may get my old job back. We all know that BEW, WPB, OPA will be greatly curtailed or abolished altogether when the war is over. These war agencies should be closed out, but I do believe some provision should be made for those of us who are being taken from these agencies to participate in another phase of the war.

President Roosevelt, in his report to the Nation on his North African visit, made it clear to the people that the boys in the armed forces wanted first to win the war, and second, jobs at home. May I suggest to the President of the United States, through the Federal Diary, that the Government take the lead in this respect by guaranteeing jobs to all the former Federal employes irrespective of their civil service status, differences in appointments, and other rules and regulation notwithstanding.

If this were done, Mr. President, a lot of us would enter the armed service with a heavy load off our minds. JOE L.

The Federal Diary reports that both the War and Navy Departments may order their Government gals into uniforms. I work in the War Department and I'm against the whole idea. If I wanted to get into a uniform I'd join the WAACS. SUZIE THE STENOG.

About the proposed uniforms for Government gals: I'm all for it. Uniforms would be more economical and they would give we girls in the Navy Department a genuine feeling of participation in the war effort. If we wore uniforms the officers who drive their cars empty over to the Arlington Building each day would have no excuse for not stopping to give us a ride. L. E. A.

Life in the War Department becomes more confused each day. The latest instance concerns the reclassification of 3A men.

On January 16, 1943 a memorandum was distributed stating in part: "Employes who have not been deferred for occupational reasons and who have wives and children . . . and are engaged in civilian activity which is supporting the war effort . . . will immediately secure . . . an Occupational Certification for Registrants Deferred by Reason of Dependency (D. S. S. Form 42B). This procedure is for the purpose of securing a reclassification to 3B." This was interpreted to mean that the War Department was desirous of securing 3B classifications for 3A men with the proper requirements. As a result, Form 42B was filled out, signed by the personnel officer as directed and forwarded to the draft boards. Draft boards have reacted in various ways. In most cases, the boards have reopened the individual's case and sent back a notice to the War Department giving them the opportunity to submit a form 42A (Affidavit Questicnnaire, etc. For Occupational deferment) which the War Department refuses to submit. Now the individual concerned has the unpleasant situation developed that after all, after commanding him to file for the deferment his employer does not desire it.

The War Department certainly has a right to its own policies on deferment but it certainly is not fair to employes to direct them to request Occupational deferment and then to refuse to back up that request by filling out the 42A. 3A.

New Md. Fire Signal

Maryland State Fire Coordinator J. W. Just said yesterday the new fire alarm signal for the State is three short blasts on fire sirens.

The signal will be sounded only once, Just said, and there will be a 30-second interval between the start of blasts. There will be no confusing of this signal with the new air raid alarms, Just said.

Boon to Gardeners

Richmond.—Mayor Gordon Ambler moved to protect victory gardeners by proposing an ordinance providing for fines of not less than $50 or more than $200 for any person found guilty of trespassing upon or wilfully destroying plants or taking products from gardens.

19 Deserted Horses Find Many Friends

Wife of Senator Leads Rescue; Search for Absent Manager Continues

Scores of horse lovers yesterday put an end to the siege of 19 thoroughbred mounts which, until Montgomery County police came to their aid late Thursday, had been abandoned since Sunday.

The rescue party was headed by a Senator's wife, who had boarded her 3-year-old colt at the stable on 8000 Connecticut Avenue, where the animals were found. She said she had no idea that her horse, Senator, was suffering from neglect until she read about it in yesterday's Post.

Asking that her name not be used, she told reporters she hadn't had time to ride very much in recent months and consequently hadn't visited her colt. "Naturally I was most upset to learn that he wasn't being cared for, so I've come to take him away," she said.

Two small boys, Richard Williams, 13, of Chevy Chase, and Philip Evans, 12, of Bethesda, former members of the riding club, volunteered to find a temporary home for Senator in the stable of a friend and Richard immediately bridled him and rode him away.

Youngsters Carry Water

Numerous other former members of the now apparently nonexistent club flocked to the aid of their beloved mounts and youngsters spent most of the afternoon hauling water for them.

Mrs. Lois Jeter, 1309 Irving Street Northwest, also arrived to get Jolly, a 10-year-old which she said she owned, and learned from the children that he was shipped away about three weeks ago when a number of horses from Rock Creek were sent to Danville, Va.

Disappointed, Mrs. Peter nevertheless supervised half a dozen youthful assistants in giving the horses hay and some of the remaining sacks of corn which, it is estimated, will last only through today.

Meanwhile scores of sympathetic animal lovers called The Post to volunteer to buy or just house the horses, anxious to "give them good homes."

Manager Not Found

Police still were unable to locate William Todd, once manager of the club who, according to members, has been out of town for about three weeks.

Nor could police learn what is to be done with the animals. According to a ruling by Montgomery County Commissioners, they must be out of the building by March 1, as the license for the stable has been revoked.

Ann C., one of the best bred of the group, got special care by her young admirers because she has at her side a tiny 3-week-old colt. Two other mares are due to foal soon.

Mrs. Veda Stinger Shares Many War Work Activities

Doing about everything possible for the war effort is Mrs. Veda Stinger of 4410 Van Buren Street Hyattsville, Md. She works in the Division of Dairy Research Laboratories, Department of Agriculture, knits for the Red Cross and invests 10 per cent of her salary in war bonds.

Mrs. Stinger and her sons

Mrs. Stinger, who came here from California in 1941, is the mother of two boys, Charles and James, 9 and 13 years old, who board on a farm. Mrs. Stinger takes care of her landlady's two children, thus earning her room and board.

"frozen" commodities.

The general feeling, however, appeared to be one of cooperation on the part of consumers, whose attitude seemed to be summed up by one of them, who stated that "there is nothing calamitous about being unable to purchase the "frozen" foods for a few days and certainly it is the least we can do to cooperate in the general war effort."

OPA officials stated that the rationing which begins March 1 will include all kinds of canned or bottled fruits and vegetables, juices and soups and dried fruits.

It was stated that point values will vary with the scarcity of each food item and the more scarce the item, the more "dear" it will be in point value; comparatively, the more plentiful the item, the "cheaper" it will be in point values.

The basis of the new program will be the issuance of War Ration Book No. 2, which will be distributed on a nation-wide basis beginning Monday. One adult of each family will be eligible to receive the ration book. This book also will be the one to be used for meat rationing which will begin, according to OPA officials, about April 1. Currently the War Ration book No. 1 is being used for sugar, coffee and shoes.

Ban on Sirens Troubles Fire, Police Bureau

Commissioner Guy Mason was confident last night that some means would be found to help District emergency vehicles, prohibited by the Army from using their sirens to gain the right of way over civilian traffic in answering distress calls.

"We'll work out the problem," he said, "the same as did Philadelphia and New York. Sirens have been prohibited in those cities for a year."

He revealed that efforts were being made to equip fire trucks and police scout cars with exhaust whistles "if they can be found and the city can find the money to buy and install them."

Mason said the city had no alternative but to abide by the siren-banning order issued by Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum of the Eastern Defense Command. The reason was that wailing sirens of emergency cars conflicted with present air-raid and blackout signals.

Few Whistles Available

In the meantime, it was learned that exhaust whistles are practically nonexistent and that "the highest priority" is needed for their purchase. Their use has been condemned by automobile mechanics and combustion engine experts as being "very harmful to motors."

Meanwhile, Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter issued an appeal to Washingtonians to be especially careful in crossing intersections. "We don't want to hurt anyone and we don't want to kill anyone," he said.

He also said that fire apparatus has been stopped by rush-hour traffic during the past two days. The failure to obtain right of way was blamed on inaudible bells, auto klaxons and a few exhaust whistles now being employed.

"Sirens are the only thing to pierce the city's noises," the chief asserted. "Exhaust whistles are probably the next best thing."

Estimate 175 Required

It was estimated that 175 whistles were necessary to equip fire and police vehicles.

Inspector Milton D. Smith, supervisor of police department equipment, said there was no money to purchase the whistles nor to pay mechanics to install them. Only three old-fashioned whistles are in police possession, he said.

Additional "locomotive" bells are being installed on fire trucks, Porter disclosed, but he was skeptical whether motorists will hear them.

"Drivers keep their windows closed today and lots of them have heaters or radios running. Naturally, they can't hear bells or horns."

In Alexandria, Va., Fire Chief James M. Duncan, jr., already has blamed confusion caused by the new fire alarm signals for slowing their arrival at the scene of a three-house blaze on Thursday.

Residence Hall Ready for First 200 Occupants

The first of an anticipated 610 women workers to take up residence in the recently completed Idaho Hall, one of the new residence halls at Arlington Farms, Va., will move into the hall on March 1, W. E. Reynolds, commissioner of public building administration of the Federal Works Agency, announced yesterday.

More than 200 employes of the War Department's office of the chief signal officer, stationed at Arlington Hall, Glebe Road and Lee Highway, will be the first tenants.

Pressed for living quarters, the women have agreed to move into the building March 1 even though a few weeks may elapse before the cafeteria service can be started, it was said. Other eligible tenants, particularly those employed at the Pentagon Building and the Navy Annex, who agree to forgo cafeteria service temporarily, will be accepted, he said.

Arlington Farms is located near the Pentagon Building and the Navy Annex. Special bus service has been arranged for the transportation of the Signal Corps employes, and for the present they will be able to obtain all their meals at the Arlington Hall cafeteria, it was announced.

Five other residence halls are being completed by the Government at the site.

Pepco Rate Fight Looms At Hearing

Move to Discuss Sliding Scale Stirs Opposition At PUC Meeting

By Roger Young
Post Staff Writer

Arguments for a complete revision of the accepted sliding scale rate adjustment plan for the Potomac Electric Power Co. similar to those characterizing the still pending gas rate hearings, are forthcoming in the annual rate hearing scheduled for March 2, a conference before the Public Utilities Commission yesterday indicated.

Although the company stated that it was asking no increases in consumer rates for the coming year, two of the four exhibits entered by the PUC showed excess returns that might call for decreases in these rates. Two more exhibits, prepared for PUC member Gregory Hankin, called for considerable decreases. None showed a deficiency in return great enough to justify a rate increase.

The conference was marked, as were the gas rate hearings, by insistence of minority member Hankin that provisions under the sliding scale arrangements be re-examined for their reasonableness.

Pepco Counsel Object

Pepco counsel were equally insistent that in a hearing called to consider adjustments under the sliding scale, the sliding scale agreement itself could not be questioned. That, they said—as did the gas company counsel—was properly the subject of a separate hearing.

The first PUC exhibit showed a rate base of $101,476,692.39, with a net amount available for return of $5,791,444.29. This would be a rate of return of 5.7072 per cent. Under the sliding scale agreement, based on a fair return of 6 per cent, rates may be increased if the rate of return falls below 5.5 per cent, but no adjustment shall be made if the return is between 5.5 and 6 per cent for any single year. On the other hand, returns above 6 per cent call for graduated rate reductions.

By estimating the Federal tax at a rate of 31 per cent (excluding war taxes) the PUC brought the amount available for return up to $6,572,640.43, which is a rate return of 6.477 per cent.

Rate of Return Figured

If the value of properties retired since 1924, when the sliding scale arrangement was adopted, were to be adjusted to original rather than to assessed value, PUC accountants figured that the rate of return would be only 5.8499 per cent. And if the latter two schedules were combined the rate of return would mount to 6.6308 per cent.

At the behest of Hankin, two more exhibits were entered by PUC accountants. One of these, based on the book cost of the utility plant, less book depreciation values and based on the 31 per cent tax rate, showed a 7.4956 rate of return, which represented an excess of $1,174,213.21 over the allowable 6 per cent. Without the 31 per cent tax allowance, the excess would be $393,017.07.

The P. E. P. Co. counsel protested vigorously against these last two schedules even being entered in the record of the forthcoming hearing. Chairman James H. Flanagan said that the commission was not ready to act upon these objections.

City News In Brief

Attorney George E. Sullivan's book, "The Road to Victory," was decided to be "defeatist and anti-Jewish" by a jury in the District Court yesterday, which therefore dismissed the half-million dollar damage suit which Sullivan filed against The Washington Post after his book was referred to in these words, in an article published April 11, 1942.

The article reported the confinement for contempt of court of one of the men who sold Sullivan's book—Charles B. Hudson, later indicted for seditious conspiracy.

Trial of Sullivan's damage suit began Tuesday before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough. Sullivan read the 795-page book to the jury and the writer of The Post article, Dillard Stokes, testified for several hours indicating portions of the work which he found "defeatist" and "anti-Jewish." Justice Goldsborough instructed the jurors to find for The Post if they believed the book was correctly described.

Pleasure Drivers

The Metropolitan Police Thursday night cited four local motorists for allegedly violating the ban on pleasure driving, the local OPA announced yesterday. The office also announced that a total of 1851 motorists have had their rationing coupons suspended as the result of violating the ban.

N. C. Society to Entertain

The North Carolina Society will entertain 75 officers at their George Washington Birthday ball tonight at 9:30 o'clock in the Shoreham Hotel, Dr. Emery Woodall, president, announced yesterday.

WAVES' Use Of Dormitory Suggested

Park and Planning Unit Approves 3 Projects to House 296 Families

The National Park and Planning Commission yesterday suggested that the WAVES be housed in the dormitories nearing completion south of the Reflecting Pool, instead of attempting to take over the former Polo Ground in West Potomac Park for barracks.

The commission also approved three housing projects proposed by the Alley Dwelling Authority, to be started immediately, which will provide homes for 296 families.

At the second day of its February meeting, the commission decided that the old Polo Field, which was first taken over by the Navy and converted into an enormous parking lot, should be reconverted into a recreational area. After the field was asphalted, marked off into parking spaces and provided with an intricate system of timber bumpers, the Navy discovered the parking space wasn't necessary. The field now is being plowed and will be used for baseball and softball diamonds and for other games.

For Postwar Plans

Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the commission, also reported yesterday upon two bills before Congress proposed by Senators Taft (Republican) of Ohio and McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee to clean out temporary housing and making definite postwar plans. After hearing the report, the commission mapped plans for its own study looking toward the demolition of temporary housing after the war and embracing postwar planning

The ADA housing approved, for which priorities already have been obtained, are for a 40-family project to be built on a parking lot at Twenty-first and E Streets Northwest, a 96 family unit in Glover Park and a 160-family project on the Barry Farms tract in Southeast Washington, all upon land already owned by ADA and to be constructed with Alley Dwelling Authority funds.

Maps Approved

The commission also received and approved a set of maps submitted by the National Housing Administration, the first showing all Government housing in the District, and the second all new construction of single and multiple family homes throughout the area. The maps revealed that the most rapidly growing section of the city was that east of the Anacostia River, where homes have more than doubled since 1940.

Life of Capitol 'Cop' Has Its Moments

"Ah, take once consideration with another, a policeman's lot is not a happy one," said Gilbert and Sullivan.

But they apparently had the wrong steer altogether, according to James A. Burcham of 1364 Otis Place Northwest, member of the United States Capitol Police Force, stationed right outside the door of the Senate Chamber.

According to Burcham, his job isn't so bad at all. "Take Thursday, for instance, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek passed within 18 inches of me three times."

"Sure, I see them all. Generals and diplomats by the dozen, to say nothing of our own dignitaries. Why, when the President gave his report to Congress after Casablanca he passed within 25 feet of me. He looked fine, too!"

"Isn't it dull on ordinary days?" "Not a bit of it," responded Burcham stoutly.

"There's always the folks—folks from everywhere. They like to hear that the tiles they're walking on were made in Minton, England, 80 years ago. They like to hear me tell about that big clock over there made in Philadelphia in 1802, when there were only 37 States in the Union.

"They all want to know where the statue of Will Rogers is. Next most popular is the statue of Huey Long.

"Best of all are all our boys in uniform. They love to look around up here and I like to make them feel at home. I tell them everything I know."

Burcham is a veteran of World War I and was decorated with the Order of the Purple Heart.

He had to stop the interview to answer a question—"Where can I see a Senator, please?"

Two New Deputy Sheriffs

Additional special deputy sheriffs for Montgomery County, to guard property during the war, have been appointed by Sheriff Robert W. Farmer, as follows: Herbert L. Carter, Armstead P. Curtis, Christopher Denison, Evan G. Powell, William Riggs and James T. Trout. All have taken the oath before Clayton K. Watkins, clerk of the Circuit Court at Rockville.

$75 in Bonds Now

Boy Joyous At Recovery Of Stamps

MYRON WINGET

Little Myron Winget, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Winget of 1820 Clydesdale Place Northwest, "broken hearted" when he lost his war stamp book—his contribution to his fighting Uncle Sam—yesterday grinned happily as he waited the return of the book which a woman notified his family she had found.

The fifth grade pupil of H. D. Cooke School lost the book Wednesday, with $75 worth of stamps therein, while going to the post-office to have it redeemed for war bonds.

An ad in the want ad columns described him as "broken hearted" over his loss. A woman found the book and telephoned that she was returning it.

1942 Juvenile Arrests Show Big Increase

By the Associated Press

Reporting that 55.7 per cent more girls under 21 were arrested last year than in 1941, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said today it "indicated a deplorable lack of parental guidance and discipline in many homes."

"Boom conditions in many communities and easy money in youthful hands," Hoover said, "are contributing to the general letdown in moral standards among juveniles."

The number of boys under 21 arrested last year increased 17.1 per cent over 1941 despite the removal of large numbers from civilian to military life, the FBI chief said.

No actual figures on arrests were published. Hoover pointed out, however, that the FBI figures—based on fingerprint records—from which percentages were calculated were obviously low because of the number of juvenile police cases in which no fingerprinting is done.

Hoover reported that arrests of girls under 21 for prostitution and commercialized vice increased 64.8 per cent last year; arrests for other sex offenses were up 104.7 per cent; drunkeness arrests increased 39.9 per cent and disorderly conduct arrests, 69.6 per cent.

Among boys under 21, arrests for assault increased 17.1 per cent; for rape, 10.6 per cent; disorderly conduct, 26.2 per cent, and drunkeness, 30.3 per cent.

The age of most frequent arrests was 18, a drop of one year from the level which predominated from 1939 through 1941.

House, Senate Rush Action On Pay Bill

Schedule Hearings For Next Week on Federal Workers' Overtime Measures

In both Houses of Congress next week, determined efforts will be made to develop adequate overtime pay legislation for Federal employes to take the place of the temporary bill which expires April 30.

Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the special subcommittee appointed to study the subject, announced yesterday that hearings would start Wednesday at 10 a. m. in the House Civil Service Committee Room.

Senator James M. Mead of New York will start next week to hold informal conferences on an overtime bill he already has introduced in the Senate. Formal hearings will begin the first week in March.

The House hearings are not to be conducted on any special bill, Randolph said, so that the Civil Service Committee can have an opportunity to draft its own bill.

The Budget Bureau yesterday was not prepared to give any estimate on the probable cost of the pay raise bill, and will very likely not be ready with an estimate when the House hearings open, but the cost of the temporary bill, on a yearly basis, was figured at $183,190,500 to cover 871,000 employes.

The Senate bill calls for time and a half, instead of time and a quarter on work in excess of 40 hours with a $2900 ceiling. Employes in the higher brackets will receive overtime only on the first $2900 of their salary.

Missing Colonel's Wife Is Presented With His D. S. M.

The Distinguished Service Medal was presented to Mrs. Martha McKeachie, wife of Col. Douglas G. McKeachie, in charge of general overseas purchasing for the American Army, listed by the War Department as "missing in action," by Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the Service of Supplies, at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H Streets Northwest, last night.

The presentation took place in an anteroom to the church auditorium and was witnessed by a few close friends of the family and Army officials.

Following was a memorial service for Colonel McKeachie in which four churchmen, the Rev. Edwin H. Tuller, assistant minister of the church; Chaplain Albert Corpening, Dr. C. W. Cranford, minister of the church, and Chaplian Alvin J. Brasted, U. S. A., participated.

His wife and 14-year-old daughter, Nancy Jane, live at New Bedford, Conn. Others of his family live in New Jersey. He also has a brother in the Army.

Dr. Houghton to Report On Religion in Camps

Dr. Will Houghton, president of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, will address the Fellowship, young people's group, at Covenant First Presbyterian Church, Connecticut Avenue and N Street, at 7 p. m. tomorrow.

He will bring a "report on Religion" from the training camps of America, according to Chaplain John Carruthers, U. S. A., who will introduce him. Dr. Houghton will go from here to his native home in Pennsylvania to bid farewell to his son, Firman, who is entering the armed services.

Victory Sidelights

Electrically-Run Map Given Firemen for Emergency Use

An electrically operated map of the city for use in war emergencies or at the time of large fires, constructed by members of the Friendship Fire Association, has been presented to Chief Stephen Porter and the Fire Department.

The map was the gift of the association, an organization of prominent business and professional men of Washington, headed by Dr. Edward R. Gookin, who banded together three years ago to form the city's first Fire Buff Club. At the beginning of the war all became members of the auxiliary fire service.

The map is designed to aid the Fire Department on the receipt of multiple alarms. Each fire company is represented on the map by a light. As companies respond to a second, third or greater alarm, their corresponding lights are turned off, darkened areas appear on the map, and sections of the city without fire protection are readily perceivable. Chief of the transfer office, Clement Murphy, or Capt. Harold F. Harding, the transfer officer, then proceeds to "reshuffle" the companies remaining in service. By telephoned orders they transfer companies represented by the remaining lights into areas which have been darkened, thus equalizing the city's fire protection.

Wyckoff Reelected

At the monthly meeting of the Washington Housing Association Thursday, J. Bernard Wyckoff was reelected for his fifth term. The following officers were also elected: Mrs. C. Carroll Glover, jr., vice president; Hon. James A. Cobb, second vice president; Dr. Laurence F. Schmeckebier, treasurer. Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman was reelected executive director. Board members reelected for a three-year term are Mrs. Anne Archbold, Rev. Robert W. Brooks, Hon. James A. Cobb, Mr. Sefton Darr, Mr. Waldron Faulkner and Edith Rockwood.

Yeggs Get $15 to $20

Yeggmen smashed open a safe at the Skinker Motor Co., 1216 Twentieth Street Northwest, early yesterday and got between $15 and $20 for their effort. Emil W. Brown, manager, reported the loss and said the intruders entered by breaking a rear window. The safe apparently was ripped open by chisels and a sledge hammer, it was said.

ON THE HOME FRONT

We are all faced with the need for extraordinrys economy. Rejuvenation of many of our household and clothing items is going to play a strong part in our lives. No woman needs to waste self-pity on herself because she has to rip, recut or remake a dress. No woman needs to think she isn't "in style" because she rejuvenates an old hat into a becoming new one.

Our grandmothers didn't whimper when they were kept busy making candles, cheese, flour and cereals. They spun linen from flax before they could have dresses or bed linens or table cloths and napkins. They cleansed wool, dyed, spun and wove the fabrics to make clothing and household items.

Today, we don't have to start at the beginning. We have many things that we easily acquired in the more carefree days. Now with the spirit to do, we can make something from nothing, or from as little as possible. Anything we possess is worth freshening and using again. But there is the wrong and the right way to rejuvenate a piece of velvet ribbon or fabric.

If you have a soiled felt hat which you know can be revamped into a spring skypiece by cleaning and restyling, then follow through in a professional way and not by the haphazard manner.

To clean a felt hat takes more than a swipe with some cleaning fluid. First the dust should be thoroughly brushed from the hat. Then it should be cleaned with a fluid cleaner. When the fluid has completely evaporated, cover a block of wood with a piece of fine sandpaper, gluing or tacking the sandpaper so that it will hold securely. Go over the hat entirely with the sandpaper, brushing very carefully and thoroughly. Next, wrap a piece of old velvet around the block and go over the hat just as thoroughly with the velvet as with the sandpaper. If the crown of the hat is discolored, perhaps it can be turned wrong side out.

If the crown needs pressing to put it back in shape, first stuff it with newspaper, and then with a cloth between the iron and the hat, steam the crown carefully. First place a dry cloth next to the crown, over it place a damp cloth and then iron it.

If you want to change the shape of a hat brim by cutting it to a new line, cut a piece of paper that will indicate where you want the hat cut. Pin this to the brim and then follow the paper outline with a razor blade, placing the hat on a flat surface that will not be spoiled by the razor blade. DO NOT USE SCISSORS, because they will not give a smooth edge. Break a razor blade in half the length way so that you will not cut yourself on the holding edge.

If the ribbon on the hat is very badly soiled, do not hesitate to revive it by washing in pure soap suds. First wash the ribbon flat with a brush as you would a blanket binding, then pat out the water. DO NOT SQUEEZE. When you replace the ribbon be sure to cut the ends so that they will look fresh too.

Often a hat becomes too large in the crown. This can be remedied by stitching two pieces of material together and placing them along the head size line inside the lining. Or a piece of adhesive tape may be used.

Metal buttons and buckles, too, are becoming scarce. But the ones we have can be cleaned and made as bright as new. To clean them, mix one teaspoonful of sweet oil and one-half teaspoonful of emery dust. Rub this mixture over the buckle or button thoroughly, and with a soft brush clean out every particle of the emery dust.

Glass or bone buttons may be cleaned with French chalk and a chamois cloth. And remember to see that all buttons are secure on clothing, for ten to one the ones which now adorn your dresses, suits and coats can not be replaced.

Gloves are an accessory that we are apt to discard when a rip or hole appears in them. But we won't be discarding clothing any more, so it is well to look to ways to make repairs.

If your fingernails have a way of wearing through the ends of your gloves, you can ward such off by placing a small bit of cotton in the ends of the fingers and thumbs when the gloves are new. The cotton will mat down readily so that the finger ends will feel comfortable. This procedure can be used for both fabric and kid gloves.

Should you want to do a real repair job on gloves, you can use the backs and tops of old gloves to make new fingers and new palms for wearable gloves. In applying a leather patch, put a coarse needle in the sewing machine and stitch with unthreaded needle around the edges. This makes it easier to sew by hand, as the sewing needle can be put through the holes made by the machine needle. Pull thread used in sewing the glove over a piece of beeswax or over a cake of soap to make it smooth and hold it in place.

When mending gloves, the new stitches will not be so noticeable if you make them replace the original stitching.

Day-by-Day Eating

Since the nutritive value of food decreases rapidly with storage, the wise home maker is being more careful to plan her market list according to the day's needs. It's smart to be able to use the leftovers—but it's thriftier not to have any!

Fashion Find

By Joanne Contini

A couple of years ago, the expression "S. S. and G." (sweet, simple, and girlish) was enough to consign any dress to Cousin Hepsibah despite fond pleas of mothers. Today sissy fashions are the thing for everyone from Grandma on down. The junior dress which we are going to discuss is no exception.

It's part of the add-a-pearl story, being actually a blouse and skirt. Spun rayon is the cloth, and it looks like baby linen, but is less mussable. The buttons are covered in fabric, including those which do justice to the skirt placket. It comes in spring flower pastels, and is without doubt the freshest, prettiest dress, we have seen put its ruffles out in the February gales.

In daffodil yellow, for instance, the fauntleroy blouse would show the sunny side of a navy suit, or gray, or brown too. The skirt will go right through the summer, and contrast well with dark tops. You could dress it up with flowers in your hair and a string of pearls, or you might try tucking the flowers in the pocket of the blouse. Lilac and aqua are the other colors.

Blouse $5.95, skirt $5.95.

And One Flew West

By Alice Tedlock Brooks

CHAPTER IX

"Hello, Aces," she smiled at them, her small white teeth flashing between her crimson lips. "Anything new?"

Johnny summoned a smile. It was getting more difficult, for he was worn out with getting up to be out here at the field by daylight. "Nothing new but the day." He picked up his helmet. "I'll see you in the funny papers."

Judith said in a friendly voice, "Are you feeling all right, Cherry? I'll help you on the books this afternoon, if you want me to."

Cherry's face had lost its smile with the closing of the door behind Johnny's back. "Thanks, I can finish it without any more of your help." She opened the desk with a quick jerk. "It won't be long before I can kiss it all goodby."

Judith paused at the door, burning with curiosity. But Cherry's unfriendly attitude had angered her and she started out.

"Waith, Judith. I'm sorry that I can't seem to appreciate what you did for me. I really ought to thank you, I know. It would have worked itself out in time, however."

"I don't know what you mean, Cherry."

"You hastened along a certain little event that I've been waitnig for." Cherry took some papers out of the desk and sat down before the typewriter. "You see, Jinx felt so contrite for having caused me to have an accident that he proposed to me."

Judith's hands tightened on her helmet strap. She tried to smile and said in a low voice, "Congratulations."

"Thanks," Cherry said coldly. "We're going to be married next month and take a few weeks off to go to the mountains for our honeymoon."

Judith's face whitened. "That's grand," she said in a small voice. She managed to get out of the door then, and walked in a daze to her trainer plane.

"Judith! What is it, are you ill?" It was Jinx, standing there, but the tears blurred her eyes so that she could barely see him. He reached out his hand and Judith felt its soft touch on her arm. She raised her eyes, drenched in tears.

"Just—just a headache," she said.

He was taking his handkerchief from his uniform pocket, and Judith could smell the pipe smoke and leather as he gently wiped her eyes. "Let's go up to the Shuffleboard and get you some aspirin and a drink," Jinx said.

"It's time for my next student." She glanced at her watch. She still had 10 minutes.

"Not a would-be pilot in sight," Jinx insisted, drawing her toward the driveway.

They heard the roar of Johnny's advanced student's plane in the sky, and glanced up. "When the cat's away—" grinned Jinx.

"We'll have to hurry." Judith felt that Cherry's eyes were upon them from the office window. But what did it matter? Jinx owed her something, after all.

He had tucked her hand through his arm as they strolled over to his car. Now with his other hand he squeezed it, and Judith's heart leaped at the feel of those brown fingers on hers. "Let's not go to the Shuffleboard. My head will be all right," she said, stopping and leaning against the car door.

"Judith, I meant to apologize for not coming to see you last week, as I said," Jinx stammered.

"Oh, that's all right. I understood. And besides, I wasn't at home."

"Oh, so you were going to let me down anyway!" he said in a teasing voice. "Don't you know that you can't do that to me, darling?"

"You couldn't let a girl down, would you, Jinx?" she asked. "You wouldn't ask Cherry to marry you the day after you told me you loved me, would you?"

He laughed, "Indeed I would not! I wouldn't marry Cherry Mason if she were the last woman on earth."

Judith's blue eyes widened. Why had Cherry told her that she was going to the mountains on a honeymoon with Jin: if it were not so? She stood looking at Jinx, her heart hammering slowly, but so hard it must burst through her blue blouse.

Jinx's gray eyes laughed into hers, then his face grew serious. "Did Cherry tell you that, Judy? And you were jealous?" He leaned forward and captured her in his arms and strained her to him. His lips pressed against hers and Judith closed her eyes.

White Russians Glory in Victory Of Red Army, Pianist Declares

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor.

Everywhere you turn people are asking: "How do the White Russians feel about the Soviet's overwhelming victories against the Nazis? Are they glad or sorry?"

So, over a cup of tea yesterday at the Mayflower, I posed the same questions to vivacious marguerite Spiridovitch, a famous pianist, concert singer and composer.

This handsome White Russian, whose husband was governor of The Crimea during the Czarist regime and who, like many others, lost her land and riches when the Communists came into power, says that in general the White Russians are happy over the Red's victories. You could see her face light up with pride when she talked of the courage and daring of the people of her native land.

"The whole world is changing," she said. "It is silly to think you can go back and pick up your old life and properties. Only a foolish, sentimentalist would dream that it could be done."

"And then she added with a twinkle in her big brown eyes, "I am a realist and so are most of the other White Russians. Few would go back even if their lands and properties were restored."

From her association with other White Russians she thinks that generally the opinion is one of pride and joy in the magnificent fighting of the Red army.

Mme. Spiridovitch thinks that after the war Russia or the Soviet Union will adopt a more liberal or democratic form of government. Therefore she sees no reason for the underlying fear of communism that many persons in this country have.

In town this week from her home in New York City, Mme. Spiridovitch, who numbers royalty by the dozens among her friends and acquaintances, was thrilled and enthusiastic over Mrs. Roosevelt. In fact, she had just left the White House when I met her. She had been having tea with the First Lady.

The two had a great deal to talk about, for Mme. Spiridovitch was a great friend and admirer of Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President's mother, and has dedicated her latest song, "Soldier, America Salutes You," to the late Mrs. Roosevelt, who often was a patron of her concerts.

By the way, the talented musician feels sure that her latest published song, "Soldier, America Salutes You," will be sung around the world the same as George M. Cohan's "Over There" during World War I. A catchy tune with simple, feeling words, the song and music certainly should be popular.

Right now, Mme. Spiridovitch's mind is filled with ideas for martial music that will inspire the American doughboys. But she doesn't stop there, often you'll find her playing and singing for them at the USO clubs in New York. While in Washington, she found time to donate her blood.

P. S. She's met both Hitler and Mussolini—hated the former the minute she talked with him. Declares that it was instinctive. However, she feels a little less violent about Benito.

Bits of This and That . . .

State Chapter of American War Mothers entertains with reception and tea tomorrow afternoon, 4 to 6 o'clock, at the American Legion Club House. War Mothers of World War II are extended special invitations. . . . Members of the D. C. Branch, National League of American Pen Women, are asked to bring their pet peeves to the business meeting Monday night, 8 p. m. Defense stamps will be given for the funniest, the queerest and the most helpful to the branch, with an extra stamp for the most humorous peeves sent by a husband, father or son of members . . . How to get the most from your vegetables, meats and fruits, in nutrition, flavor and vitamins, will be taught in a nutrition class starting Monday morning, 10 o'clock, at All Souls Memorial Church Parish Hall, Connecticut and Cathedral Avenues, according to an announcement by Mrs. Malcolm Moss, chairman of training classes in nutrition of the American Women's Voluntary Services . . . Notre Dame de Namur Alumnae holds annual breakfast tomorrow, 9 a. m., in the Chapel of the Convent of Notre Dame, North Capitol and K Streets.

It's About Time

IT'S ABOUT TIME to use a piece of georgette to keep your felt bonnet dust free. Rub this over the hat before you place it back in its box. A small piece of felt is also good to use for removing dust and lint from felt hats.

Rationing Made Easy

When and How Shall We Register for Ration Book II?

Registration will be held in Washington's 76 public schools from February 23 to 26, inclusive. Apply at the school nearest your home (probably the same place you obtained Ration Book I) and take Ration Book I with you. Know the number of cans of processed food you have on hand so that you can fill out the declaration form quickly when you are registering. Note: Meat and fish in cans need not be included in the declaration, even though OPA has announced that they are to be rationed later. The meat and fish order is entirely separate from the canned fruit and vegetable order.

The District OPA requests that you register in alphabetical order: Persons whose last names begin with A through D should register on Tuesday, February 23. E through K—on Wednesday, February 24. L through R—on Thursday, February 25. S through Z—on Friday, February 26.

REMEMBER: Retail selling of canned fruits and vegetables will be suspended as of February 20—to be resumed March 1.

Your Baby and Mine

Late Hours Are Not for Children

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It should be plain to any mother that the hours of daytime are for the children's recreation and the hours of evening for their workaday parents.

It is only in the daytime that a child can have an opportunity to get out in the air and the sun. It is then only that he can have companionship with children of the same age. It is in the daytime, when the parent is occupied with her own household duties, that a child can play in ways that are typical of childhood, without being constantly thwarted, scolded, nagged and punished by idle, onlooking adults.

The child who sleeps by day and stays up at night, lives in a world peopled entirely by adults. She takes part in their activities, goes to picture shows, is dragged along to make visits or take part in entertainments. It is an unnatural life and makes for wan-eyed, cross, spoiled or over-indulged children.

Mrs. M. says she has tried to tell all this to a friend who allows her 2-year-old daughter to sleep until 10 or 11 and then keeps her up until the same hour at night.

"The child is smart and adorable but she has some bad habits. You never know when she is going to come up and kick or bite or spit at you. If the grandmother criticizes, the mother pets the child and then she is as bad as ever. Perhaps it will help her to read something in your column about this."

Surely any mother must be hard-headed indeed who puts into practice methods of child-rearing that are the very opposite of the usual and the familiar. If she doesn't know that a child of this age should be up by 7 and in bed by the same hour at night, it is certainly not because she isn't aware that this is the pattern every conscientious mother follows:

As for the habits, they are somewhat typical of her age and not indicative of a mean disposition or even of the bad hours she keeps. Children are so eager to be noticed by other children that they attack them painfully, when all they want is to be looked at and played with.

The habits can be discouraged by showing the child that what she gets is not notice but isolation. If she is separated from the children and set to playing alone, with the explanation that she can play when she can treat them nicely, she'll soon learn.

It is helpful to teach her polite and pleasant ways to greet children, by patting their hands, or encircling their waists. It is often only ignorance of what to do that inspires a child to do the dramatic thing which in the past has seemed to work so well.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn

The South player of today's hand probably wished his contract was three no trump, which would have been easy to make, rather than four spades. South managed to take ten tricks at the suit contract, however, by discarding a winner in order to make sure of a trick which otherwise would be lost by adverse trumping.

Declarer won the opening lead of the club jack with dummy's queen, and returned the queen of spades, discovering the 3—0 adverse split. He then cashed the ace and king of hearts in North and entered the closed hand to take the two top clubs. When West followed on these leads the good heart queen was discarded from dummy on the last club.

Declarer's last heart was trumped in dummy and three high trumps in his hand gave South the three tricks needed for his contract. He lost one trump trick and two diamonds. Note that if declarer does not throw away North's heart queen on the board he will lose a heart ruff to West and three diamond tricks for down one.

Healthy Hair Makes Its Care Easier and Improves Appearance

By Martha Ellyn

Everyone is busy these wartime days. And according to the late edict of the President, many women will be busier than ever when they work 48 hours. There may not be time left to visit beauty salons. Wartime schedules have not been made up with allotment for hair-doing.

But most any woman will admit that her spirits are higher when she can show a shiny, well-groomed head of hair. It may be that the hair gets more soiled than usual in the role of a defense worker. Notably the perspiration glands may work overtime, especially if you work long hours at top speed. You'll notice this condition especially in a perspiring scalp.

If you care about nice hair when the war is over, you will not run pell-mell to shampoo a perspiring dome several times a week. Frequent shampoos often aggravate a scalp condition and make the hair unmanageable.

Fortunately the scalp and hair can be kept beautifully clean and fresh by cleansing with lotion between shampoos, and thus the hair is not weakened and the natural oils destroyed by too much soap and water.

Hair experts like the eminent sister group—the Ogilvies—are especially concerned about the hair and the abuse it may be subjected to during the war period. They are, of course, insistent about proper method of shampooing, and give the following suggestions:

Use Dependable Shampoo

Use the finest liquid shampoo preparations you can get—mild and pure, free from harsh substances. Never rub cake of soap directly on hair. Use soft water if possible. If hard water is used, get a soapless shampoo which blends with it. Be sure to rinse thoroughly as this is half the secret of shining hair. Brushing, too, they advise is important to the health and beauty of the hair.

Not two or three licks with any kind of a brush will do the work. These hair specialists have devised in hair brushing a beautiful rhythm. It is really an exercise that helps takes the kinks and aches out of weary bodies. Try their method of brushing the next time you feel below par and note how it replaces bodily tension with an easy relaxation. This is their procedure:

BEND—Stand with feet well apart, in order to be evenly balanced as to weight distribution. Now bend over from the hips, keep knees straight. Throw head forward and relax. Go limp all through upper part of trunk, arms limp, head limp on the limp column of throat. Now slowly, then faster, faster, swing upper trunk and arms to right, then to left. Ten times.

Head Exercises

Now to original stance: feet apart at least 6 inches. Bend from waist as before, arms limp. Toss head from right to left, then from left to right. Toss to release an additional flow of blood to scalp. Toss—to stimulate a better flow in the oil glands. Toss—to acquaint the hair roots with fact that they are receiving an unusual share of attention. Toss—ten times.

BRUSH

Having limbered torso and having aroused a freer circulation in the scalp, grasp long-bristled brush firmly. Be completely relaxed as you brush from back of neck forward. Brush upward and outward in long sweeping strokes.

RELAX . . . AND REPEAT

After a short rest, resume bend-and-brush stance; feet apart, weight evently placed. Bend as before.

Slowly twist torso to right as far as you can. Slowly return to center. Next slowly twist torso to left as far as you can. Return to center. Stand upright. Now bend from waist, knees straight, hands dangling loosely. Try to touch floor. Stretch as you make every effort to reach that goal. Resume upright position. Then bend to brush.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

A Woman's Woman

Within the last four years four of the most widely known women in the world have visited Washington—Queen Elizabeth of England, Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, the Duchess of Windsor and Madame Chiang Kai-shek. Queens have had their homage, and so has Cinderella. And now Madame Chiang has come symbolizing the voice of woman in the affairs of the world.

Those who heard her in the House of Representatives or over the radio Thursday speaking in her perfect, clear-cut English of "democratic principles" . . . the "liberation of men's spirits" . . . "humanitarian action" . . . a "better world," could not but have felt the impact of the future. Women who listened must have heard the voice of their sex speaking down through the ages and across the barriers of space and race. Here was a woman, called the most powerful in the world, saying the things women had always been saying and for which they had been ignored, then laughed at and mocked and called visionaries, idealists and sentimentalists. Here was a woman living and working in what was called man's world and making no weak or cheap concessions to "realists," but taking her stand definitely with those who were so naive as to believe things could be made better. Here was a woman who said boldly "let us not be visionaries but yet have visions," who pleaded for a world "in which all peoples could live in harmony and peace," and who pledged that China was ready to make the sacrifices for such a world.

Queens Had Their Day

Not so long ago another great woman leader, Queen Wilhelmina had stood in the House speaking of war . . . and democracy . . . and the Four Freedoms . . . and a "peace with justice." A 61-year-old woman she was, who for 51 years had been a queen by accident of birth, but who also by accident of brains and character had been a strong and sagacious ruler. Symbol of all the solid civilized things that had once been Europe and a dignified representative of a valorous people she was given an ovation by members of Congress. And the crowds outside the Capitol cheered her as she passed because she was a gallant figure—and a queen.

Before that, in days that now seem strangely peaceful and remote, crowds stood packed on downtown sidewalks to see another queen pass, a lovely storybook queen such as the women on the sidewalk with eager upturned faces had played at being when they were children. Elizabeth had bowed and smiled, playing graciously and perfectly her outmoded role, and those who saw her had gone home living in a world of tiaras and red carpets and marble stairs.

Cinderella Also Passed By

Two years later crowds had gathered downtown again to catch a glimpse of a vivacious Duchess whose Duke had once been a King, a Duchess who had been a commoner, and an American commoner at that, and who most important of all, was reputed to possess that twentieth century alchemy of smart dressing, charm and sophistication guaranteed by style and beauty experts to open any door to a woman.

And now Mme. Chiang Kai-shek is here and fittingly she has come last taking her chronological place in public interest. For the tradition of royalty is passing and even America has at last had its curiosity sated about queens, princesses and grand duchesses. Also to the world of yesterday belongs the Cinderella who achieves everlasting happiness by such a simple technique as marrying Prince Charming. And today most women have sterner realities to think about than what the Duchess of Windsor has that they haven't.

Exponent of Women's Hopes

So Madame Chiang comes at the right moment, for today women can identify themselves in spirit with her as they once did with the queens and Cinderellas. They can relive their own hopes and visions in her achievements, in her influence, and in her mental and spiritual fortitude.

On Thursday members of the House of Representatives clapped until the chamber resounded, and they rose to their feet still applauding when Madame Chiang made her moving and militant call to the United States to strike hard at Japan. But when in equally stirring tones she called upon Congress to make a peace "not punitive, not provincial or nationalistic, or continental, but universal in scope" to make a "safe world for society," the applause was much fainter. However, most of the women who heard her knew that she was speaking their language, voicing the idealistic hopes they would always cherish. And when she declared, "we in China, like you, want a better world, not for ourselves alone but for all mankind and we must have it," they knew she was speaking out of the wisdom of China, and of women, their common undying faith.

MEMO TO MISS BROWN

SUBJECT:

Unenergetic Bliss

You are probably becoming a mere shadow as a result of your strenuous program of modern dance, singing, sewing, drafting and all that. If so, maybe a bit of languorous enjoyment could be injected into your life without causing any fatal attacks of arteriosclerosis. So suppose you prepare to sit calmly back and listen to fine music some day next week (or sooner).

By far the biggest thing that has come to those of us who prefer to take symphonies in light and painless doses is the series of "15 to 30" concerts which in Lincoln fashion have been organized of, by and for young people. Dr. Hans Kindler acts as guiding light, but programs and guest artists are selected by a committee of anything-but-Methuselahs. Two concerts remain in the present series—one is tonight at Constitution Hall—8 p. m., and stars Sergt. Eugene List (age 23), with the National Symphony Orchestra. Prices start at 55 cents, which is a mircle in the hall that houses longhairs. Next event is March 13, same place, same time, same price. If you are enthusiastic to the point of wanting a hand in the works, call Patricia Morris at MI. 0266 (in the evenings) and she will promptly invite you to a meeting of the committee.

"Listening to Music"—via recordings—goes on at the USO Club, 1814 N Street Northwest, and at the Jewish Community Center on Mondays at 8:30. The latter also has a "listening" program on Fridays at 1 p. m. for night-shifters.

More "live" stuff (and free) can be heard at Fort Myer Chapel (Arlington Cemetery) every third Sunday at 3:30 p. m. These programs include organ, vocal and instrumental music

The "Hour of Music" at Washington Chapel (Sixteenth and Columbia Road Northwest), gives with organ and guest soloists on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 8 p. m. Free, too.

If you don't feel qualified to listen with an appreciative ear, try the course in Listening to Music at the Y. W. C. A. This class starts March 23, meets Mondays from 8 to 9 p. m., and goes on for eight weeks for a mere $2. This includes discussions of the sonata, Latin-American music, Scandinavian music, instruments of the orchestra and, of course, the three B's.

The "Y" has informal musicales each Sunday afternoon at 5 p. m. and Victrola hours on alternate Mondays at 7:30 p. m. Thus you can put your knowledge into practice without turning more than one eyelash.

Calvary Baptist Church goes in for music appreciation every Tuesday at 8 p. m. (Eighth and H Streets Northwest.) And many of the churches have informal musical programs from time to time.

All Souls' Unitarian Church, for example, will present a program of music of George Washington's time tomorrow at 5 p. m., followed by Beatrice Pinckney Jones, piano-diseuse (you look it up in the dictionary!) doing some fancy Chopin, followed by tea at 6.

Then, too, it's possible to find more than one program of good music on the radio, squeezed in between news commentator and the latest installment of "Helen Brown's Second Husband's First Wife."

Strange Facts About High Blood Pressure

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

I have just run across some pronouncements by a medical man, made several years ago, about high blood pressure which I believe still obtain and furnish some pointers which may be useful:

Dr. Clendening

1. Doctors who have studied the condition most carefully do not know whether high blood pressure is a symptom or a disease.

2. One leading authority has put down 14 basic causes for high blood pressure. This should be noted by those who write in and ask me what is "the" cause of high blood pressure.

3. Business worries, domestic troubles, personal anxiety and frustration can be contributing causes or at least causes which make the condition worse.

4. One can inherit a tendency toward the condition.

5. High blood pressure may exist for years without causing any symptoms.

6. Since it is a disturbance of the arteries and since the arteries go everywhere in the body, it is natural that a great many conditions are associated with it. For instance, angina pectoris, or heart pain, goes with high blood pressure. Also, kidney changes which may be reflected in the urine accompany it. An oculist may often detect high blood pressure by examining the eyes. When long continued, it may cause apoplexy and some mental deterioration.

7. About half the patients with high blood pressure live out their life expectancy.

8. Women bear high blood pressure better than men.

9. All plans for treatment should include psychological methods of treatment and some of the best results are accomplished by psychological means.

10. The basic rules for improvement are to eat less, smoke less, work less and sleep more.

11. Tobacco is far more harmful than a moderate use of alcohol.

12. There is no special treatment nor are there any drugs which will cure high blood pressure permanently.

A Chinese doctor once told some of my American friends that our trouble was efficiency, punctuality and discipline. He said, "A Chinese abhors efficiency because it leaves him no peace of mind; punctuality because he wants plenty of leisure; too much discipline interferes with personal liberty. You Americans pay for your efficiency with high blood pressure."

1. Keep calm. Avoid war news and discussions.

2. Avoid stimulating food and drink.

3. Avoid constipation. Keep in good general health.

4. Avoid tight-fitting collars or any constriction around the neck.

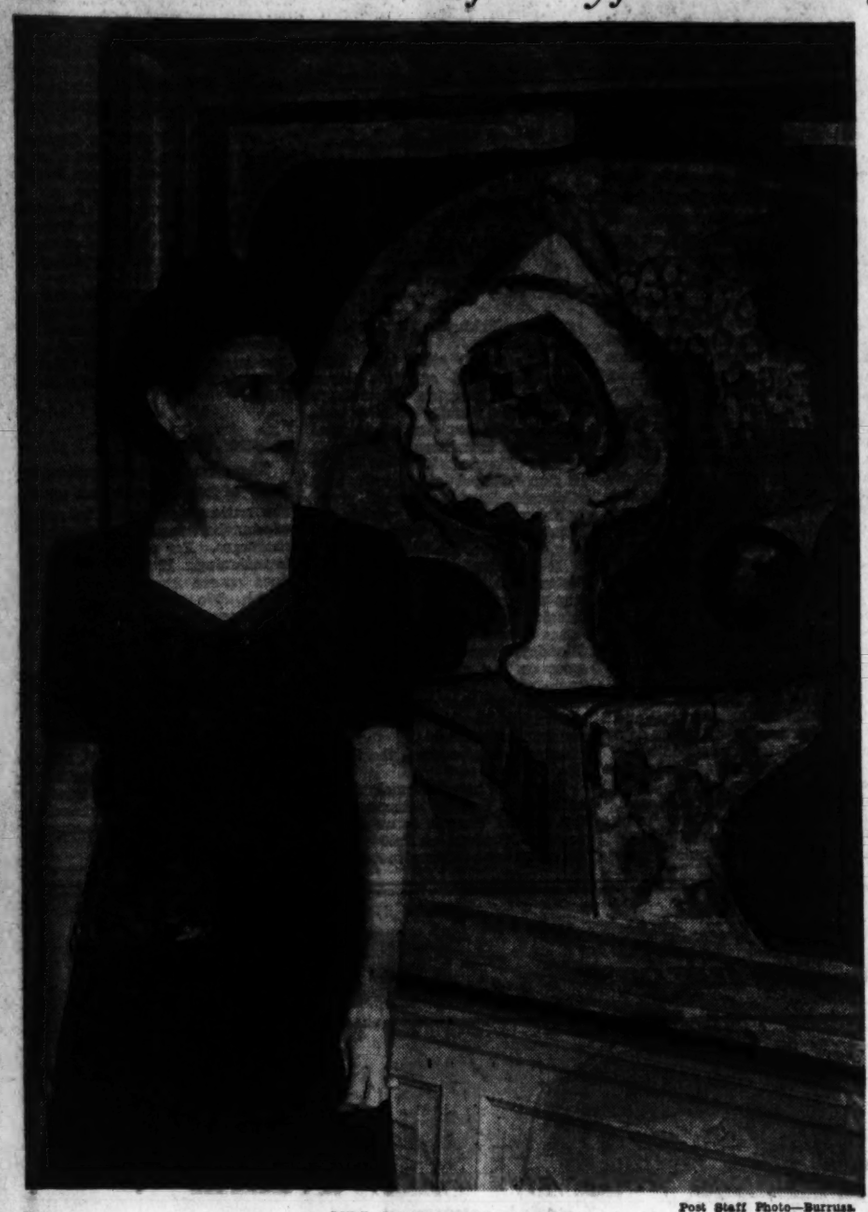
She Ventures Into 'Sheer Abstractionism' With Her Exhibit of Playful Paintings



MRS. HUMPHREY CLARKE — Post Staff Photo—Burruss

Liz Clarke's One-Woman Show Opens Here

By Peggy Preston

Visitors to the Phillips Memorial Gallery in the next fortnight will be interested in Liz Clarke's one-woman show of humorous, playful paintings that are a venture in sheer abstractionism.

Of the exhibition that opens tomorrow and continues through March 3, the former California artist explains:

"I've tried to keep the subject matter cheerful and in the realm of fantasy, for I think there is a need for such things just now. For this time I've included only one war painting, 'Air Raid,' although like most artists I've done a good deal of such work recently."

With their three young children, the Clarkes have been making their home at 1701 Nineteenth Street, where they will entertain for a few friends following tomorrow's exhibition.

As an artist, Mrs. Clarke is currently enjoying a considerable achievement: Last week she closed a one-woman show of her work in the Bignou Gallery in New York and, as soon as the paintings could be shipped here, have been hung for her second show in a month.

First Exhibited In 1928

Her first exhibition in the United States was held in 1928 and since that time her colorful vivid abstractions have been represented in scores of exhibitions and in private collections. The Barnes Foundations in Philadelphia recently purchased her "Man With Balloon", which is to be included in the show here.

Liz Clarke was born in the Southwestern part of the United States and has lived in many corners of the world, including Paris, Hawaii, New York, and more recently in Santa Barbara. She began her study of painting in Provincetown and later went on to the National Academy of Art in New York.

Her present style was developed and influenced by her work in Paris at the Ecole de la Grande Chaumiere and her teacher, Antoine Bourdelle, an exponent of modern European art. Back in this country she worked for a time with Alexander Archipenko and others of that school of technique.

Creates Ballets And Sonnets

But painting is only one of her artistic talents. In addition to being a top-notch abstractionist, versatile Mrs. Clarke has produced ballets and published several books of sonnets, including "Rose on the Sand."

"I like to try my hand at other forms of art," she says, "But I always come back to painting."

Since coming to Washington, Mrs. Clarke has done several paintings for service camps and canteens and proceeds from the sale of pictures in her current exhibition are for the benefit of British war prisoners.

After the war, the Clarkes plan to make their home in England at the Clarke ancestral home in Gloucestershire. Mr. Clarke, a banker, is the son of Sir Orme and Lady Clarke and a cousin of Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt.

New Congresswoman From New York Is Both 'Folksy' and 'Glamorous'

Capital Captivated By Representative-At-Large Stanley

By Margaret Kernodle
Associated Press Feature Writer

Washington.—For a minute or more of the Seventy-eighth Congress it looked as if she might be the forgotten glamour girl of the GOP. Then 33-year-old Winifred C. Stanley, New York Representative-at-large, captivated the Capital.

She's a gal after the whole country's heart. She's so folksy she even admits a political thing or so has got her dander up, and she's so glamorous she doesn't even know it.

This Buffalo beauty is a tiny thing but figured to be whistled at. She sat there in the old House Office Building looking as feminine in a tailored gray wool suit as she might in a frothy tulle frock because the suit was so finely fixed in the right spots, so daintily trimmed with white pique and chicly set off by big pearl beads and earrings—just the right thing to look slightly sensible in a congressional office.

Her white hair calls attention to a "teen-age" complexion worth coveting.

Has Excellent Sense of Humor

Her friends find her on the quiet side—but you should hear her lovely laugh. They say "she's one of the smartest things alive," but she saves her feminine skin with her swell sense of humor.

Her office is full of potted flowers. Pussy willow, a red-flowered evergreen and one of those year-'round plants brighten the austerity of the files and usual congressional furnishings in her outer office. In that outer office on the day I saw her, three big mail bags bulged with letters for the mighty little miss from Buffalo. A photo of Abraham Lincoln lay on the table. (She made a Lincoln Day speech in North Carolina.)

REP. WINIFRED C. STANLEY

She pointed to a pile of assorted mail on her desk. Her day is a dither. She's up at 7:30 at the latest, streetcars to the Capitol in 35 minutes from the Fourteenth Street apartment which she shares with her secretary, Abbie Hauck (it's a sublet for two months, then she looks again for a place to live).

They grab a quick breakfast at the Capitol coffee shop. By 9 o'clock she's dictating letters, which she continues till 10 or 10:30 if she can sneak the time. Then she sees at least a couple of callers by appointment (it took me three weeks to get one), pushes more people in if she can get by with it. At quarter of 12 she goes to the House session, which may last till 5 o'clock.

After the session she goes back to her office. Right now she's making up her mind whether to come to work earlier or stay later. She's pretty sure that as soon as she starts active committee work on the Patents and Civil Service Committees, to which she's been appointed, she'll begin sooner and work possibly till 11 at night.

Finds Living Less Convenient Here Than in Buffalo

She Does Her Own Washing

Living's less convenient in Washington than Buffalo. There is a grocery store on the corner, where she gets her food—which she can cook because she's the oldest of six children. She's doing her own washing, a blouse a day, gloves, stockings and underwear. Just like a lot of American girls, she would consider it too extravagant to own enough lingerie to be able to wait two weeks or longer for it to come back from the laundry. She considers herself well off with three pairs of hose, is a conservative shoe buyer, but, oh, my goodness, how she goes for hats!

Congresswoman Stanley has sense enough to stay home when she has a sore throat even if it means missing a debut at Evalyn Walsh McLean's. She gets excited over eating shredded sharkskin at the Chinese Embassy.

She hates to be hesitant, refuses to send out form letters, and is eager to encourage more women to be active in politics, especially women with families. She's bound to smash the negligent attitude that allows an intelligent person to say "I'll have nothing to do with politics," and she says that even if she sounds like a reformer she's sincere in her belief that "the minute you add one more honest person to politics, the better your government is."

Miss Eleanor Neill to Be Married To William E. Chambers, Jr., on March 6

Miss Eleanor Neill, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Neill, has selected Saturday, March 6, at the date of her marriage to Aviation Cadet William Ely Chambers, jr., U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Chambers of New York and Hewlett, Long Island.

Miss Neill will return tomorrow from New York, where she has been spending several days being entertained at a number of prenuptial parties. Mrs. A. Ely Terry of New York, grandmother of the bridegroom-elect, gave a dinner Thursday evening at the Stanhope for Miss Neill and her fiance, and on Thursday afternoon Mrs. Chambers, mother of the prospective bridegroom, gave a tea at the Stork Club for the young couple.

The ceremony will be held in St. Alban's Church with the rector, the Rev. Charles T. Warner, officiating, and a reception will follow at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Neill. Miss Nedenia Hutton, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Davies, will be maid of honor, and the other bridal attendants include Miss Cathleen Ely Chambers, sister of Cadet Chambers; Mrs. Elmon A. Miller, jr., Miss Nancy Ryder, Miss Ann Huidekoper, Miss Mary Jo Hall, all of Washington, and Miss Grace Eddy of Boston.

George Clay of Philadelphia, classmate of the prospective bridegroom at Harvard University, will be best man. Ushers are John Talbot, Peter Dunham and George O. Schrafft of New York, Robert Tappan of Boston, Manuel Prado of Peru, Alfred Parkhurst and Ensign Malcolm Thompson, U. S. N. R., of Washington, and Lieutenants Robert Gamble and Benjamin Day of the Army Air Forces.

Miss Smallwood Is Bride of W. N. Beasley

In the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation Wednesday night, Miss Eleanor Warrene Smallwood became the bride of William Neister Beasley.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Dorothy Hubbell Smallwood and Mr. Beasley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Beasley, jr., of Lynchburg, Va. The double ring ceremony was performed at 8:30 by the Rev. Edmond H. Stevens.

Edward Parmelee Hubbell gave his granddaughter in marriage in the absence of her brother, Grahame Thomas Smallwood, who is on overseas duty. Lynwood Yates Taylor served as best man, and ushering were Capt. Amos Hubbell Cobb and Lieut. Allan K. Bramkamp of Cincinnati.

After a wedding trip to Radford, Va., the couple will make their home in Washington.

Miss Barbara Lamb Engaged to Wed

Miss Barbara Sue Lamb of Washington and Lieut. Myron W. Warren of Dayton, Ohio, whose wedding will take place in the early spring, were the guests in whose honor Capt. and Mrs. L. B. Wright and Mr. and Mrs. Grant Thompson entertained at dinner last Sunday night, when the engagement was announced.

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mrs. Susan Lamb of Regina, Saskatchewan, and is with the Union of South Africa Supply Mission in Washington. Lieutenant Warren is stationed at Wright Field with the Experimental Engineering Division of the Materiel Center. Before receiving his commission in the Army he was with the Department of Agriculture.

Open House at All Souls' Church

Mrs. William P. MacCracken will be on hand this evening at All Souls' Memorial Episcopal Church to welcome servicemen and Government workers at an "open house" from 8 to 11 o'clock. Mrs. MacCracken has arranged games, dancing, refreshments and other entertainment for the guests.

Assisting as hostesses will be Mrs. William S. Quinter, Mrs. Robert Sterrett and Mrs. Wayne Wirgman, who is president of the Rector's Aid. No cards of admission are required.

Miss Johnson To Be Bride of F. E. Storer, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Johnson of 35 East Seventy-sixth Street, New York, and Worton, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Virginia Boyer Johnson, to Francis Ellingwood Storer, jr., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Storer of 270 Park Avenue and Ridgewood, Conn.

Miss Johnson was graduated from Foxcroft School in 1942 and is now attending Barnard College. Because of the war she did not make a formal debut but was guest of honor at a small dinner-dance given by her parents in December. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Boyer of Baltimore, Md., and on the paternal side she is a direct descendant of Thomas Johnson, the first Governor of Maryland. Miss Johnson is the sister of Wayne Johnson, jr., a student at Harvard University and a member of the Marine Corps Reserve, and Hamilton S. Johnson.

Mr. Storer was graduated from St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and attended Yale University, where he was a member of the Fence Club. He is a grandson of Mrs. George B. Read and a brother of Mrs. William B. Lusk, jr., both of New York. Mr. Storer will be inducted into the Army this month.

No date has been set for the wedding.

John H. McGuires To Make Home Here After Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. John H. McGuire, who are now on their honeymoon, will make their home in Washington.

The former Miss Ruth Evelyn Emmerson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Emmerson of Takoma Park, Md., and Mr. McGuire, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. McGuire of Prenter, W. Va., were married on Monday in the Walter Reed Memorial Chapel. The Rev. B. T. Beckham officiated at the 8:30 o'clock evening ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white satin cut on long torso lines with flaring skirt and train. Her finger-tip veil was held to her hair by a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried a white Bible to which were pinned gardenias.

Miss La Vern Byrd was the maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Meriam Kemmerer and Miss Elnora Tasker.

Norman McLintock was the best man and the ushers were William McNall and Edward Miller. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Shirley Key Wed To W. Hehmeyer

Mrs. Herbert Spencer Herbine of this city announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Shirley Key, to Walter Hehmeyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Hehmeyer of Caldwell, N. J.

The wedding was held at noon last Saturday in All Souls Memorial Church with the Rev. H. H. Sterrett officiating.

The bride was gowned in a blue street-length dress and wore a small lace hat with a short veil. She wore a spray of orchids and carried a white prayer book.

Capt. Richard Royall Baker, jr., of Alexandria escorted the bride to the altar and gave her in marriage. Her only attendant was Mrs. Donald Buchholz of this city, who carried an old-fashioned bouquet of roses.

The groom had for his best man his brother, A. Frederick Hehmeyer of New York City. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother on Morrison Street.

Following a honeymoon in New Orleans the young couple will be at home at 3901 Morrison Street, in this city.

Mary Rita Olive Is Married to Lieut. J. K. Lach, Jr.

The wedding of Miss Mary Rita Olive, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Olive, to Lieut. Joseph K. Lach, jr., son of Mrs. Joseph K. Lach and the late Mr. Lach of Pennsylvania, took place on Saturday, February 13, in the rectory of St. Mary's Church at Rockville, Md. The Rev. Thomas J. McKew officiated. Mrs. Edith Melvin Brueckner was maid of honor and Scott Pollock was best man.

After a dinner party of a small gathering of friends of the couple at the Victory Room of the Hotel Roosevelt, Lieut. and Mrs. Lach left for a brief honeymoon in Pennsylvania.

William R. Arnold—

Chief Army Chaplain Has Dual Role of Soldier and Priest

This is another in a series of stories about the men who are running the war. The next will appear on Monday.

By Patricia Grady

"We are at war with pagans, atheists and Satan himself."

Brig. Gen. William R. Arnold, Chief of Chaplains of our Army, speaks with vigor and certainty. This big-framed, tough-muscled chaplain has the mind of a practical fighting man and the heart of a Catholic priest. He knows that men fight best in a security of their faith and a righteousness of their cause. The American soldier doesn't need to be convinced that he is fighting on the side of God, but it is the job of Chaplain Arnold and his men on global battle fronts to give the soldier evidence that God is fighting on his side.

"Sound and vigorous spirituality in thought and action is the only sure foundation for real patriotism and personal peace and happiness," booms forth the he-man voice of this soldier-priest. "This is a war that must not be lost, and in a deep sense we have strength in the knowledge that the forces of Christ and humanity have never lost a war and can never lose one."

Despite the precedent of "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition," the men of Chaplain Arnold's Corps are noncombatants under the terms of the Geneva Convention. The chaplain must be always free to minister to the living and the dying. It is that sense of service and of duty that caused Chaplain Arnold to say, "Though a chaplain is a noncombatant, if there is need for him to defend his cause or himself in battle, let him take it as his duty. A dead chaplain is no good to his men."

Army Sets Example

Of the 250 religious denominations in this country, 40 are represented in the corps, made up entirely of commissioned officers. Every effort is made by the individual chaplains to provide services of the soldiers' chosen faith. "The work of Army chaplains for each other," points out Chaplain Arnold, "and their efforts for men in their units of faiths differing from their own, presents a picture of religious cooperation which might well have some lessons for the churches in civil life."

Known as "The Chief" to his subordinates, this graying-blond officer is the first Catholic to hold the post of Chief of Chaplains. His spiritual leadership is recognized by all denominations and his deep humility of spirit and humanness is felt by all who meet him. He has the practical mind of a good administrator and the persuasive personality of the born leader.

This spiritual commander of the United States Army is the Hoosier-born son of a Swiss father and Irish mother. Both of his parents were devout Catholics and that early training plus the influence of an almost saintly priest, Father Courdt, in Bluffton, Ind., led him naturally into the church. During his college years at St. Joseph's College in Rensselaer, Ind., he made the track, baseball and football teams and learned the trade of a tobacco stripper under his father, who was a tobacco maker. He still holds his union card, and his smoker's love of tobacco.

BRIG. GEN. WILLIAM R. ARNOLD

Worked as Circus Clown

Chaplain Arnold also worked as a water carrier for men working on the railroads and later toiled a 12-hour day in the Muncie steel mills. He entered St. Bernard's Seminary in Rochester, N. Y., after his graduation from college and was ordained in 1926. Back in Indiana as an assistant priest, he satisfied a secret longing by becoming a clown with the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus during his summer vacation. He also beat the bass drum in the circus parades.

Then came a period of five years in Peru and his entry into the Chaplains Corps as a first lieutenant in 1913. During the war, he was in the Philippines and later came to Camp Taylor, Ky., to serve as an instructor in the Chaplain School. He was graduated from the Chaplain School at Leavenworth, Kans., in 1924, first in his class, and was sent back to the Philippines for more duty. He was appointed to his first term as Chief of Chaplains in 1937 and is now serving his second term.

Christian Soldiers On the March

During this war, Chaplain Arnold finds that even the products of our naturalistic education are turning more and more toward a formalized religion. Church attendance in the Army is very high—a tribute to the truth of the Bataan sergeant's remark, "There are no atheists in foxholes." The chief chaplain knows that the individual character of the Army chaplain, his leadership and understanding, can make a great difference to the spiritual morale of the troops.

"They must be men among men," he says with conviction, "but filled with the Divine spirit. They must have courage; they must have character; they must have a sense of humor. They must be physically fit—of course, the Army sees to that—and mentally alert. It is an asset if a chaplain is good at sports, but, whether he is or not, he should be a sportsman.

"Catholic, Protestant and Jewish, in its spirit," he continues, "ours is an Army of truly Christian soldiers marching on to war with Satan, and on to victory."

Beatrice Slade Is Married to Sayre Shafer

Miss Beatrice Alice Slade, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Randolph Slade of Chevy Chase, Md., became the bride of Sayre Shafer at a candlelight wedding service in the Chevy Chase Methodist Church at 8 o'clock Saturday evening. Mr. Shafer is the son of Mrs. Montgomery Rea Shafer, also of Chevy Chase. Officiating were the Rev. Clifford Homer Richmond and the Rev. Edward Gardiner Latch.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father and wore a gown with fitted bodice of white chantilily lace and full white satin skirt. Her finger-tip veil of white illusion was held in place with a crown of lace and orange blossoms and her bouquet was of white roses and sweet peas.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Wilbert Charles Lewis, who wore a pink gown with lace bodice and full skirt of mousseline de soie. Her arm bouquet was of deep red roses. Bridesmaids were Miss Bertha Berry Shafer, Miss Carolyn Alice Slade of New Castle, Pa.; Miss Charlotte Elizabeth Edwards and Miss Beatrice Boxer of Washington. They wore pale green gowns with lace bodices and full skirts of mousseline de soie and carried arm bouquets of pink roses.

Casper Bernhardt Shafer, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers were Montgomery Rea Shafer, jr., Phillip Barton Shafer, Albert Ernest Slade, and William Colton Palmer. A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bridegroom's mother.

The bride is a graduate of Wilson Teachers College and is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma Sorority and Kappa Delta Pi honorary fraternity. The bridegroom is serving with the United States Coast Guard.

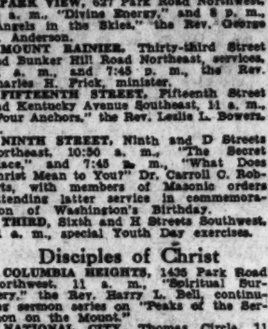
"GOD IS LOVE"
— JOHN BOWRING —



God is Love; His mercy brightens
All the path in which we rove;
Bliss He wakes and woe He lightens;
God is wisdom, God is Love.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This hymn, an especial favorite of the Christian Scientists, was taken from Sir John Bowring's "Hymns" published in 1825. The author led a full life of service; he held many important official positions, and was a great leader of religious thought.

Two Bishops To Speak At Foundry

Two bishops of the Methodist Church will occupy the pulpit of Foundry Church tomorrow.

At 11 a. m. the message will be brought by the resident bishop of the Boston, Mass., area, Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, D.D., LL.D., and at the 8 o'clock evening service, Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, D.D., LL.D., resident bishop of the Dallas, Texas, area, will speak.

The latter's message will be on "A Neglected Essential," in connection with the general topic of the study series of the Foundry Forge, "Christianity at the Crossroads." He has traveled extensively in various parts of the world and was formerly president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and for 20 years pastor of one of Methodism's greatest churches before his election to the episcopacy.

The Foundry minister, Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, in announcing these two bishops states that they are two of the most outstanding leaders of American Protestantism and have a vital message for these times. Neither one has ever before spoken from the McDowell memorial pulpit, in the erection of which, as a memorial to Bishop William Fraser McDowell, they were much interested.

Flag Rites At Berean Tomorrow

A service flag will be dedicated tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Berean Baptist Church, Eleventh and V Streets Northwest, honoring its men in the service.

Dean William West of Howard University will speak on "This Is Our War," and greetings will be heard from Chaplain Luther F. Hill, Fort Belvoir, Va. Mrs. Viola Oliver of Service Club No. 2 and others. Mrs. Mary Scott will lead the dedicatory service.

Privt. McKinley Smith will sing, accompanied by Rufus Smith, Fort Belvoir. Boy and Girl Scouts from the Twelfth Street Branch, Y. M. C. A., will give a salute to the flag.

Walther League To Give Program

The Walther League of Christ Lutheran Church, Sixteenth and Gallatin Streets, Northwest, will sponsor a special program tomorrow for young people of the congregation and enlisted men, starting with a supper at 6 p. m.

The Rev. Edgar Rakow at 7 p. m. will deliver the first in a series of talks on the Bible under the sponsorship of the Potomac Zone of the Walther League of the churches of the Missouri Synod. His opening discussion will be based on The Gospel of St. Matthew. There will be a social after the talk.

Catholics to Mark Special Day

Twenty-two million Catholics bow their heads in prayer tomorrow for the reverence of Biblical Sunday. Across the Nation from the pulpits of 14,000 churches will come the collective voices of the hierarchy and clergy, sounding the renowned message of Pope Leo XIII's Encyclical, Providentissimus Deus.

This being the golden jubilee year of the "Leonine Pope's" famed scriptural encyclical, the Catholic Biblical Association has prepared a wartime Bible program to extend through the Lenten period.

Archbishops and Bishops of American Dioceses have issued pastoral letters suggesting the specific Biblical program laid down by the Catholic Biblical scholars.

In many of these letters the example of our armed forces is cited. Soldiers and sailors here and abroad are encouraged by their chaplains and officers to turn to the Bible for encouragement and inspiration.

The War Department has distributed 500,000 copies of a special pocket size New Testament, revised by the Catholic Biblical Association. One of these Government issued books of the Bible was carried by Private Bartek, who was with Captain Rickenbacker's Pacific mission.

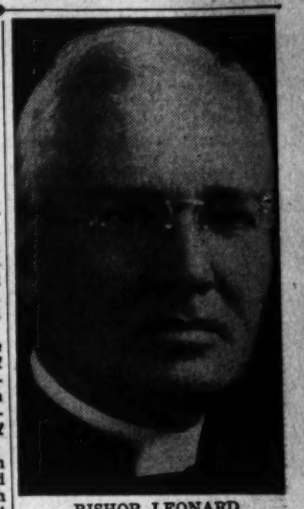
Bishop Leonard to Preach American U. Jubilee Sermon

Service Celebrates The Founding of Local Institution



BISHOP LEONARD

Preaching from the same pulpit from which Bishop John Fletcher Herst in 1890 made the first public announcement of the proposal to organize the American University, Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, resident prelate of the Methodist Church and chairman of the Board of Trustees of the American University, will deliver a historical jubilee sermon tomorrow at 11 a. m. in Metropolitan Memorial Church.

This service will inauguarte the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the founding of the American University and will be the first in a series of special services and testimonial dinners in recognition of the event.

The jubilee convocation with academic procession will be held in Metropolitan Memorial Church Wednesday at 5 p. m. President Paul F. Douglass will speak on: "Washington, New Frontier Town." That same evening a buffet supper for anniversary guests will be served in the Women's Residence Hall from 6 to 8 o'clock. A reception honoring the members of the faculty of 1914 and 1925 will be held during the same hours in Great Hall. The anniversary pageant, "The Founders," written by Prof. M. C. Batchelder of the department of English, will be given in the college gymnasium at 8 o'clock.

The FUTURE OF THE JEWS and the END OF THE WAR OF THE NATIONS!

The Bible declares that the DECISIVE BATTLE OF THE NATIONS will be fought outside of Jerusalem.

Is God through with the Jews or will they become a NEW NATION IN PALESTINE?

If so, will that mark the beginning of a new age of peace, prosperity, and the revival of righteousness?

Tens of thousands of Jews have been slaughtered in Europe—hear about the vengeance that will soon come upon their cruel killers. Both Jews and Gentiles will be captivated by this unusual lecture! Not a dull moment! One moving panorama of interest from the beginning to end!

Church Federation Renders Variety of Social Services

Rev. Francis McPeek Describes Work of Welfare Group

(This is the third in a series of articles about the wartime role of the Washington Federation of Churches, whose annual financial drive is now in progress, with this year's goal at $38,000. The work of the Defense Commission will be described in the next article.)

By the Rev. Francis McPeek
Director, Federation Social Welfare Department

One day last week a public health nurse called in to say that a young mother, age 18, was unable to provide clothing for her 7-month-old child. Within an hour blankets, flannelettes and other infant needs were ready for the young mother and baby. From stocks provided by local women through the Washington Council of Church Women, it was only one of the several hundred requests handled yearly by the federation's department of social welfare.

A few minutes later a Government officer inquired over the telephone which churches of the metropolitan area were equipped to make an easy conversion into day-care centers for children. The information was promptly supplied.

The department of social welfare, established in 1937 to coordinate the social service work of the Protestant churches in Washington, renders daily a variety of services. Pastors obtain information from the office on the specialized types of help in the community available to their parishioners. Private and public welfare agencies work through it to obtain the help of churches in the interests of their families and clients.

MR. McPEEK
Guides destinies of Federation's social welfare department

Hundreds Assisted

Hundreds of people in the past five years have been assisted in one way or another to a greater degree of independence and security through the efforts of the office staff and of the federation's social welfare committee, headed by the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, rector of Georgetown's historic St. John's Episcopal Church.

Under the Rev. Mr. Tucker's leadership the following statement of policy was adopted last year: "Community needs must be met on a community basis, and not on the basis of creed or race. It is our job wholeheartedly to support every program for the betterment of Washington. We believe that anyone who suffers has a legitimate claim on our sympathy and service, and that we must respond as generously as our resources and functions as churches permit.

But there is more to it than simply waiting until people do find themselves in difficulty. Prevention is better than remedy. "We further believe," the statement continues, "that as followers of Christ we have the duty and right to speak against the destructive evils among us. We will do so, responsible to no man for the judgments of our conscience, and mindful ever of those broken by selfish forces they can neither protest or avoid."

Thus the Department of Social Welfare is expected to enter into the field of community planning, of Christian social education and action. This it does in several ways.

Its members meet with representatives of civic groups and public agencies to discuss and plan for better care of children, for the extension of rehabilitative services to delinquents and adult offenders, for the enactment of local legislation designed to improve the health and moral tone of the community.

It helps local churches organize welfare councils composed of representatives of the various classes and groups in the congregation and helps them attack problems in their neighborhood. When a church or denomination wishes to embark on a major social welfare program facts and suggestions are assembled for their consideration.

Education about the community is stressed. Up-to-date information on almost any aspect of community welfare is available to church workers and pastors, and information on the work of Washington's many social agencies is likewise assembled for them. A color slide film on Washington's housing problems—as one example of community education—has been seen by 800 persons, meeting in small groups, since the first of the year.

Volunteers Recruited

Inasmuch as the department of social welfare is set up as a general service office to the churches and to the community, its work touches on many fields. Volunteers are recruited for various badly needed forms of personal and group services in the city and are directed to those organizations that can best use them.

Arlington Church Gets New Pastor

The Rev. Robert W. Long of Oceanside, N. Y., accepted the call as pastor of Faith Lutheran Church, Arlington Va., it was announced yesterday.

He succeeds the Rev. George J. Grewenow who entered the chaplaincy of the U. S. Navy December 14, and has been in charge of the Oceanside Evangelical Lutheran Church for nearly 5 years and prior to that was assistant pastor of one of the largest Lutheran churches in Toledo, Ohio.

Long is a former classmate of Mr. Grewenow and completed his clergical training at Capital University Seminary, Columbus, Ohio, in June, 1934.

A special congregational meeting will be held tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. to discuss plans regarding Mr. Long's installation. Vincent Gingerich of Takoma Lutheran Church, will deliver the sermon tomorrow at 8:30 and 11 a. m. His topic will be "The Laborers in the Vineyard."

Mt. Rainier Church Plans Flag Service

The congregation of St. John's Episcopal Church, Mount Rainier, Md., tomorrow at 11 a. m. will bless and dedicate a service flag for its 23 men in our armed forces.

The emblem is a gift of the Rev. Walter P. Plumley, former vicar of St. John's, and now an Army chaplain stationed somewhere in England.

The Rev. Richard H. Wilmer, jr., St. John's vicar, will preach on "Serving God and Country." The flag will honor the following men: Malcolm Reintzel, Edward Stebbins, George Lang, Perry Boswell, jr., Donald Xander, Francis Xander, James MacGregor, Robert Hunt, Charles Rocker, Jack Ryan, Charles Wamaling, Bernard Myles, William Norton, Shepherd Miller, James Dewhurst, Charles Rosenberger, jr., Burcher Brown, Albert Theibault, Donald Glading, Preston Bauman, Melvin Cooke, Norman Myles and Thomas Newell.

St. Gabriel's to Hold Annual Card Party

The annual card party for the benefit of St. Gabriel's Church will be given in the parish hall, Webster Street at Illinois Avenue, Monday at 8:15 p. m.

General chairman for the party is the Rev. Louis Albert. Mr. William O'Dea is chairman and the other committee members are as follows. Tickets, Mrs. J. A. Egan; patrons, Mrs. S. J. Garrity and Mrs. Charles McHenry; games, Mrs. James Butler, Mrs. J. C. Curtin and Mrs. Dennis Corbet; prizes, Mrs. Walter Smith; cakes, Mrs. Thomas Gallegher; publicity, Miss Phyllis Hoseit and Mrs. John Riseling. Hostesses for the party will be Mrs. J. C. Kraft, Mrs. John E. Malloy, Mrs. Margaret Bridaham and Mrs. J. A. Phelps.

Methodist Churches to Mark Layman's Day Tomorrow

3 Congressmen Slated to Speak At Observances

The role of the layman will be reviewed and honored by three Congressmen in observation of Layman's Day in Washington's Methodist Churches tomorrow.

At the Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest, Representative John Sparkman of Alabama, teacher of the Hamline Brotherhood Bible Class, will deliver an address on "Methodist Men in World Reconstruction." A service flag in honor of 72 men and women in the armed forces will be presented at the service at 11 a. m.

Two Texas Congressmen will deliver talks at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. Representative George H. Mahon and Representative Fritz G. Lanham will speak on "The Essence of Victory." Both are noted laymen. Mahon will speak at 9 a. m., and Lanham at 11 a. m.

The Eldbrooke Church, Wisconsin Avenue at River Road, will also participate in the observance of Layman's Day, with Alden Hoage, lay leader of the church speaking on "Methodists and Reconstruction."

Senator Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin will address Laymen's Sunday services at 11 a. m. at Trinity Methodist Church, Fifth Street and Seward Square Southeast.

Layman's Day will be observed at both the morning and evening services at Lincoln Road Methodist Church, Rev. George H. Bennett, pastor. At 11 a. m. Col. Doane P. Kiechel, lay leader of the Nebraska Conference, and vice president of the South Central Jurisdiction Board of Lay Activities, will be the guest speaker. M. R. Speelman will preside and conduct the services. In the service at 8 p. m. Alden W. Hoage, prominent attorney of this city, connected with Southeastern University, will address the congregation. George Stuntz will be the presiding officer for the laymen's group.

Justice Bolitha J. Laws of the District Court and teacher of the A. B. Pugh Men's Bible Class at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, will speak at 11 a. m. at Petworth Methodist Church, Grant Circle and New Hampshire Avenue Northwest. Damon A. Spencer, church lay leader, and Dr. Frank Steelman, pastor, also will take part.

COMMISSIONER FLEMMING

Arthur B. Flemming, a Civil Service commissioner and lay leader of Foundry Methodist Church, will speak at 11 a. m. at Brightwood Park Methodist Church, Eighth and Jefferson Streets Northwest. The Rev. Robert K. Nevitt is pastor.

Layman's Day will be observed at Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church tomorrow morning with special services on the Program and Challenge of the Christian Church. Addresses will be given by C. Oscar Berry on the educational work of the church, by Miss Pauline Shoemaker on the church and its youth, and by Mrs. J. P. Dodge on the missionary program of the church. Henry Gilligan, lay leader, will preside and the pastor will participate in the service.

The young people's choir will sing at services tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Waugh Methodist Church, Third and A Streets Northeast.

Fund Drive Goal for 1943 Is $38,000

The wartime role of the Washington Federation of Churches will be emphasized at a number of religious services in local and nearby churches tomorrow, when "Federation Sunday" is celebrated in connection with the federation's annual financial drive. This year's goal is $38,000. The drive continues through the early part of March.

Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce and now chairman of the Washington Roundtable of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, is honorary chairman of the campaign, and Dr. William S. Abernethy, formerly pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, is active chairman. Dr. Frederick E. Reissig is federation executive secretary.

Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church, is chairman of the drive's special gifts committee.

In connection with the special Sunday, the following federation officials will be guest speakers in churches tomorrow:

Dr. Reissig, 11 a. m., Nineteenth Street Baptist Church, and 7:45 p. m., Woodside Methodist Church, Silver Spring, Md.; 11 a. m., the Rev. Albert Masmussen, director of the survey and church planning department, Mount Pleasant Congregational Church; 11 a. m., the Rev. Francis W. District Young Disciples Open Annual Midwinter Institute

Open Forum, Visit To Pan American Building Planned

The ninth annual Midwinter Institute of the young people of the Disciples of Christ, Washington area, opened last night at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, and continues through tonight.

Today's schedule will include a trip to the Pan American Building, followed by an open forum. Then, at 6:30 p. m., there will be a world fellowship dinner in the Vermont Avenue social hall, with representatives of several races and nations taking part. The conference will close with a consecration service and installation of new officers. "Facing Life With Christ" is the general theme of the institute.

There are three discussion groups at the rally — "Personal Friendships," led by the Rev. M. C. Schellenberger, pastor of Baltimore's First Christian Church; "Portrait of Christ," Mrs. J. Warren Hastings, wife of the pastor of National City Church, and "Universal Church," led by Dr. Carroll C. Roberts, pastor of Ninth Street Christian Church.

Members of the Metropolitan Presbyterian youth group will be guests of the Trinity Epworth group at a buffet supper tomorrow at 5 p. m. at Fifth Street and Seward Square Southeast. Guest speaker, Miss Virginia Horsman, commissioner of community service, Washington East Methodist District Youth Fellowship.

The Rev. V. P. Thomas, Indian student at Princeton Theological Seminary, will address the three groups of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church tomorrow at 5:30, 7:30 and 8:15 p. m.

Chaplain Merritt F. Williams of the United States Navy will be the preacher at the 11 o'clock service Trinity Episcopal Church, at which time the service plaque of the parish will be dedicated by the rector. Chaplain Williams was on duty aboard the Wasp when she sank. There are 41 names on Trinity's roll of honor, two of them being women.

Annual Notre Dame Mass Tomorrow

The Rev. Arthur O'Leary, S. J., former president of Georgetown University and now attached to St. Aloysius' Church, will be the celebrant of the annual Memorial Mass of the Notre Dame de Namur Alumnae tomorrow at 9 a. m. in the Chapel of the Convent of Notre Dame, North Capitol and K Streets. Father O'Leary will also preach the sermon. The music of the Mass will be provided by a choir composed of the members of the alumnae.

Following the mass a breakfast will be served in the convent. Reservations for the breakfast must be made with Miss Catherine McMahon, ME. 1404, or Miss Marie Noha, ME. 5122.

Immediately following the breakfast an informal reception will be held in honor of Father O'Leary, Sister Marie Claire, S. N. D., superior of the convent, and the other sisters.

The semiannual business meeting of the alumnae will complete the program. Miss Kathryn A. Creveling, president of the alumnae, will preside.

TEMPLE OF CHRIST TEMPLE OF CHRIST TEMPLE OF CHRIST
HEAVEN
Where Is It?
JOHN FORD, an outstanding Bible lecturer and evangelist, will draw aside the curtain of the mystery of the future life and will reveal to you real people: living, loving, working and accomplishing things never dreamed of in this life, on one of the best known planets in the universe. The name of the planet and a detailed description of life there will be given in a vivid, intensely interesting way SUNDAY NIGHT at 8 P. M.
He Will Answer These Questions:
—What do the inhabitants of Heaven look like?
—What is their occupation?
—Do children always remain as children?
—Do the people recognize one another as people they knew in this world?
—Will the happiness of heaven be marred because a loved one is missing?
Other Lectures:
Tuesday, 8 P. M.—
"Can the Edict of Any Man or Church Bar a Person from Heaven?"
Wednesday, 8 P. M.—
"The Three Heavens: Do People Progress from One Heaven to Another?"
Thursday, 8 P. M.—

Dr. McCartney To Be Preacher At Cathedral

The fourth in the series of united services will be held at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Washington Cathedral, with the Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, as the guest preacher.

This series is sponsored jointly by the Washinton Federation of Churches, and the Cathedral "on behalf of a united people in time of national emergency," and each month presents a noted speaker, either clergyman or layman, as guest preacher.

Special music has been arranged by the Cathedral choir of men and boys under direction of the acting organist and choirmaster, Ellis G. Varley. Among the selections to be sung are the anthems, "O Lord, Increase My Faith," by Orlando Gibbons; and Part II of Mendelssohn's "Hear My Prayer" and the hymns, "The Shadow of the Evening Hours," and "Lead On, O King Eternal." Members of the Cathedral clergy and representatives of the Washington Federation of Churches will participate in the services.

The Canon Chancellor of the Cathedral, the Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, will preach at the 11 o'clock services of morning prayer and litany in the Cathedral tomorrow.

Throughout the week services will be held daily at 7:30 a. m., noon and 4 p. m.

Concert Led By Phil Kerr

Phil Kerr, noted song leader and composer, assisted by Sol Hoopii guitarist, will present a sacred concert tonight at 8 o'clock at the National Tabernacle, 6440 Piney Branch Road Northwest.

Dr. Paul W. Rood, president of the World's Christian Fundamentals Association, will speak tonight, and again tomorrow at 11 a. m., 3 and 8 p. m.

He will also conduct a series of daily "Crusade for Christ" meetings each night in the coming week at 8 o'clock, as follows:

Monday, women's night, although men are invited; Tuesday, men's night, but women are invited; Wednesday, community night; Thursday, family night, and Friday, youth night.

DID MADAME CHIANG KAI-SHEK ALLUDE TO ALASKAN MORALE IN HER ADDRESS TO CONGRESS?

Is not she concerned about our boys—the builders of AMERICA'S BURMA ROAD—CHINA'S NEW LIFE LINE—who are fighting the battle of the wilderness, isolation and loneliness?

"... Far-Flung, Out-of-Way Places, Stations ..."

dreary drabness—day after colorless day—routine humdrum duties—isolated spots—monotony of waiting, just waiting. EVERYTHING possible to lighten their tedium and buoy up morale should be done. That sacred duty is YOURS."

IS NOT THAT SACRED DUTY—the giving to OUR men the SACRED STORY of the CHRIST of the Human Road? . . . a voice crying out of the wilderness of the North.

Dr. McCartney To Be Preacher At Cathedral

The fourth in the series of united services will be held at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Washington Cathedral, with the Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, as the guest preacher.

This series is sponsored jointly by the Washinton Federation of Churches, and the Cathedral "on behalf of a united people in time of national emergency," and each month presents a noted speaker, either clergyman or layman, as guest preacher.

Special music has been arranged by the Cathedral choir of men and boys under direction of the acting organist and choirmaster, Ellis G. Varley. Among the selections to be sung are the anthems, "O Lord, Increase My Faith," by Orlando Gibbons; and Part II of Mendelssohn's "Hear My Prayer" and the hymns, "The Shadow of the Evening Hours," and "Lead On, O King Eternal." Members of the Cathedral clergy and representatives of the Washington Federation of Churches will participate in the services.

The Canon Chancellor of the Cathedral, the Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, will preach at the 11 o'clock services of morning prayer and litany in the Cathedral tomorrow.

Throughout the week services will be held daily at 7:30 a. m., noon and 4 p. m.

Concert Led By Phil Kerr

Phil Kerr, noted song leader and composer, assisted by Sol Hoopii guitarist, will present a sacred concert tonight at 8 o'clock at the National Tabernacle, 6440 Piney Branch Road Northwest.

Dr. Paul W. Rood, president of the World's Christian Fundamentals Association, will speak tonight, and again tomorrow at 11 a. m., 3 and 8 p. m.

He will also conduct a series of daily "Crusade for Christ" meetings each night in the coming week at 8 o'clock, as follows:

Monday, women's night, although men are invited; Tuesday, men's night, but women are invited; Wednesday, community night; Thursday, family night, and Friday, youth night.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Wickard Gets Full Backing of President

IN THE last few days the President himself has silenced Administration critics of Claude Wickard, and decreed that he remain as Secretary of Agriculture.

The President's stand came at the height of an increasing storm brewing round the amiable Indiana corn farmer, whom everyone likes, but whose all-important food program is lagging.

White House advisers have told the President that Wickard's program was inadequate, that it must be drastically revised, that there would be shocking deficiencies of food. Some have urged that Wickard be replaced.

The President, however, has defended his Secretary of Agriculture. But also he has appointed White House Secretary Lauchlin Currie—whose regular field is Chinese relations—to act as umpire on the farm program. Currie has now given Wickard a nine-point program for revamping American agriculture and among other things has pointed out that England increased her food production 50 per cent with little additional manpower. Why, he asks, cannot the United States do the same?

Nine-Point Program

HERE ARE Currie's proposals, advanced with the blessing of the White House:

1. THE GOALS of agricultural production should be higher.
2. A NEW production program, possibly with a new budget, should be presented to Congress.
3. ALL acreage allotments and other restrictions on production should be removed to encourage the more efficient farmers.
4. THE one million dollar farm operators of second-rate efficiency should be brought into full production with the aid of seed, fertilizer, livestock, machinery and even land.
5. COTTON and tobacco acreage should be reduced, corn acreage allotments removed entirely and more wheat should be fed to livestock.
6. PROFITING by British example, a new "land army" should be organized, to use town and city dwellers, especially women, for farm work.
7. TRUCK farmers who produce such luxuries as iceberg lettuce should be converted to more essential crops.
8. FACILITIES for processing and drying foods should be increased.
9. LOCAL direction of the farm program should be shifted away from Farm-Bureau-minded agents, toward agents more responsive to Federal direction.

Wickard's Farm Program

WICKARD'S response to this sweeping proposal was to accept part of it, reject part.

He believes the production goals are already high enough, that it's too late to present a new program for 1943, that cotton goals have already been substantially lowered, and tobacco reduction would require change of the law.

He agrees to removal of acreage restrictions on most crops, but not on cotton and wheat, which still yield embarrassing surpluses.

Claude is a little touchy on the question of county agents and committeemen, insisting that Federal representation is adequate.

On other points, however, he agrees with the White House proposals, declaring some already are in effect. He wants to bring the 1,000,000 less efficient farmers into full production, to increase dehydration of foods, convert truck farmers from iceberg lettuce, etc., and organize a new land army from towns and cities. In fact, he already has a plan well advanced for the "land army."

Wickard, who had hardly been heard of before his elevation to Wallace's place in the Cabinet, has had clear sailing for two years, thanks in part to good weather.

Now, however, he is facing just as tough a job in trying to produce more, as Wallace faced 10 years ago in trying to produce less. No Secretary of Agriculture ever faced more opposite and more difficult problems.

Wickard knows his position is shaky. But he is on his mettle, fighting to meet the production goals.

Industrial Miracle

IT DIDN'T make headlines, but an interesting piece of news came out of Erie, Pa., the other day, which goes to the roots of the whole war production program.

The news was that the General Electric plant at Erie had turned out its 100 shaft of destroyer turbines a full 11 months ahead of schedule. This was an industrial miracle and a tribute solely to Charles E. Wilson, ex-head of General Electric, now cooling his heels part-time in Washington because the Army is jealous of his getting hold of the war production picture.

When the Navy first informed General Electric's Erie plant that it would need more turbines, local officials threw up their hands. A turbine is a complicated piece of machinery containing thousands of small blades, all set by hand. The Erie plant had been making one turbine a month, said the Navy's demand of two per month was impossible.

But Wilson, then head of General Electric, jumped in personally, worked out a mass production method, threatened to chop off heads and before very long had production up to eight turbines a month. Now production is even higher, and the plant has just completed its 100 shaft of turbines 11 months ahead of schedule.

Yet, when Wilson resigned a $150,000-a-year job to take $8000 with the Government, he was kept waiting for months. Arriving in Washington late last summer to become vice chairman of the WPB in charge of production, he had to wait until February 4 before an order was signed clearly setting forth his powers.

Jealousy of the Army clique which rules supplies was the reason. This issue of Army rule or civilian rule over war production which finally brought a showdown, in which Donald Nelson discharged Ferdinand Eberstadt and placed Wilson in charge of all WPB production is now at a white heat and due for a showdown any minute.

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

IT'S DAYS LIKE TODAY THAT MAKE A MAN APPRECIATE A QUIET HOME AND AN EASY CHAIR.
POOR OLD BINGO WORKED SO HARD THIS AFTERNOON I TOLD HIM TO TAKE A NAP BEFORE DINNER!
WHAT DID BINGO DO TO GET SO TIRED?
GEE, POP! HE BARKED AT ALL THE PAPER BOYS AND THE MAIL-MAN AND CHASED THE GROCERY TRUCK CLEAR BACK TO THE STORE!

JOE PALOOKA — We're On a Furlough — By Ham Fisher

SAY, YOU'RE LEEMY AH BATEESE AREN'T YOU? WELL YOU'RE TO COME WITH ME.
OH YEAH!
WE ON FURLOUGH! SCRAM!
AH YOU CAN'T PULL US ON NO DETAILS— SO PEDDLE YER PAPERS!
NEBBE YOU TRY TO TAKE US IN— SHREEMP!
AIN'T NO USE ARGUIN WITH YOU BIRDS— HERE— IT'S AN ORDER!
THEY SAID IF YOU WAS ON A DATE YOU COULD BRING 'EM ALONG.
HOW LONG THEY GONNA KEEP US?
JUST A COUPLE OF MINUTES. YOU GOTTA IDENTIFY SOMEBODY.

JANE ARDEN — Made for Each Other? — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

ALL THIS TALK OF MARRYING ME OFF—I'M LEAVING—I CAN'T TAKE IT!
I'LL BE GOING, TOO, THEN—
WHERE ARE YOU GOING?
WAIT—WE'VE BEEN THROUGH A LOT TOGETHER, JANE—AND YOU ARE VERY DEAR TO ME—
PETROV—ARE YOU PROPOSING, TOO?
NO—I'M NEAR THE END OF MY ROAD—YOU TWO HAVE A LIFE-TIME AHEAD OF YOU—
I'VE FACED THE ENEMY WITH YOU BOTH—EACH OF YOU HAS WHAT IT TAKES—
I KNOW, PETROV—BUT—COME ON, JANE!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

CLARK TIPTOES TOWARD THE FIGURE LYING IN WAIT FOR HIM BUT HE MAKES A BETRAYING SOUND...
OOPS!
AS THE FIGURE WHIRLS, CLARK LEAPS IN. THERE IS A STRUGGLE. A CAMAS COVERING COLLAPSES ON KENT'S OPPONENT...
GOT YOU!
I'VE GOT HIM! I'VE GOT THE VOICE!! NOW TO REMOVE THE HOOD AND SEE WHAT YOU LOOK LIKE!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Directive Is Effective — By Milton Caniff

AT A UNITED STATES ARMY INSTALLATION SOME DISTANCE FROM WHERE FLIP CORKIN LANDED AFTER HIS RESCUE...
TERRY LEE, SIR!
COME IN, LEE—I HAVE THE PAPERS ON YOUR CASE...
YOU STATE THAT YOU WERE WORKING FOR THE CHINESE ARMY WHEN YOU WERE FORCED BY JAPANESE AGENTS TO WEAR THE UNIFORM OF AN AMERICAN SERGEANT...
YES, SIR...
THE MEN OF OUR RAIDING PARTY WHICH ATTACKED THE JAP AIRFIELD WHERE YOU WERE A PRISONER SAY THAT YOU FOUGHT WELL ALONGSIDE THEM—BUT FAILED TO REVEAL YOUR CIVILIAN STATUS...
YES, SIR...
AFTER REVIEWING YOUR RATHER UNUSUAL CASE, LEE, THE COMMANDING GENERAL HAS MADE THE DECISION YOU WILL FIND WRITTEN THERE!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

SO YOU THINK I'M A WICKED, BAD-TEMPERED OLD MAN, DO YOU, GRAND-DAUGHTER? CRAYTON! COME HERE!
PREPARE A SUITE FOR MISS PATTI AND MRS. WORTH—THEY'LL BE MY GUESTS FOR A FEW DAYS!
BUT...!...!
HANGED IF I DON'T LIKE YOU, CHILD! YOU'VE GOT SPUNK! PRETTY GOOD SIGN YOU'RE A PARKER!
NOW! SEE WHAT YOU'VE DONE—LETTING THAT LITTLE SNIP INTO THIS HOUSE! WE'LL HAVE TO ACT QUICKLY TO—CORRECT YOUR BLUNDER!

MICKEY FINN — Not in the Plans! — By Lank Leonard

AFTER WE'RE SWORN IN, WILL WE BE ABLE TO GO HOME FOR A FEW DAYS?
OH, YES! YOU'LL BE GIVEN LEAVE PAPERS AND ORDERED TO REPORT HERE AT A CERTAIN TIME!
NAVY RECRUITING STATION
WE'LL BE TOLD TO REPORT AT THE SAME TIME, WON'T WE? WE WANT TO STICK TOGETHER!
YOU'LL REPORT AT THE SAME TIME—BUT AFTER YOU'RE SWORN IN, YOU'LL BE SPLIT UP!
W-WE WILL?
W-WHY?
WELL, FINN—YOU'LL BE A RAW RECRUIT! YOU'LL HAVE TO GO TO A "BOOT CAMP"—A TRAINING STATION—
—BUT COLLINS—YOU'VE BEEN IN THE NAVY BEFORE AND YOU'LL HAVE A RATING!—YOU'LL HAVE TO REPORT TO A RECEIVING SHIP!

MR. AND MRS. — All of a Saturday Morning — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

DIXIE DUGAN — A Bully? — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

(508-308) PARDON THIS STUPID MOMENTARY HYSTERIA, MISS DUGAN, BUT MY BROTHER (508-308) UNJUSTIFIABLY BEAT ME UP AND I'M ASKING THAT YOU HELP ME (508-308) PLEASE, MISS DUGAN—HE-HE'S IN THE HALL...
I MOST CERTAINLY WILL!—SEND YOUR BROTHER IN!
IN THIS CASE THE GOOD OLD-FASHIONED WAY WOULD TEACH A BULLY A THING OR TWO—IF I ONLY HAD A HAIRBRUSH!
MISS DUGAN?P
WHY YES—WOULD YOU MIND WAITING OUTSIDE? I'M WAITING FOR SOMBONE—THAT SOMEONE'S ME! I'M BOB'S BROTHER!
PSSST—GIMME TH' RULER—YOU'D BETTER USE THIS!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Landfall — By Frank Martinek

I THOUGHT FOR A MINUTE I HEARD A PLANE, BUT I GUESS—
HEY—LOOK!
DO YOU SEE SOMETHING SOLID OVER THERE?
LAND!
OH, BOY! THANK HEAVEN WE DIDN'T LOSE BOTH THE OARS!
BIRD, TAKE IT EASY!
DON'T WASTE YOUR STRENGTH, THAT SHORE LINE'S MILES AWAY—AND PROBABLY WITHOUT A SINGLE HUMAN BEING.

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

WE'VE MADE A PLATFORM O' BALES UNDER TH' HATCH, MATE!
SWELL! NOW SET ALL HANDS TO UNRAVELING THIS OLD HAWSER—MAKE US A SUPPLY OF STOUT CORD!
EVERYBODY GET THIS!—WE'VE GOT TO WORK SILENT AS SHADOWS! WHEN CROKEE'S TWO OFFICERS BRING THE COOK ABOARD, THEY'LL PROBABLY KNEEL ON THE DECK TO LOWER HIM INTO THE HOLD!
WAHOO AND I WILL BE WAITING—WITH HEMP NECKTIES! YOU MEN BE READY TO—BAM!
WAHOO HEAR STEPS! SOMEPIN' HEAVY BEIN' DRAGGED ACROSS LIM DECK!
OKAY, BOYS! STAND BY FOR THE PICNIC!

DONALD DUCK — Testing a Guarantee! — BY WALT DISNEY

CREAM!
YOUR MONEY BACK IF YOU DON'T AGREE OUR'S ARE THE BIGGEST AND BEST IN TOWN!
YOUR MONEY BACK IF YOU DON'T AGREE OUR'S ARE THE BIGGEST AND BEST IN TOWN!
THAT'S RIGHT! WE DON'T THINK YOURS ARE THE BIGGEST AND BEST!
OKAY, SON, WE CHEERFULLY BACK UP OUR GUARANTEE! HERE'S YOUR MONEY BACK!

King of the Royal Mounted

THAT'S RIGHT, SIR.. I'LL BREAK TRAIL FOR YOU TO SPRUCE LANDIN!
TAMMIE, IF MY HUNCH IS RIGHT, YOUR FATHER'S DEATH WAS ONLY THE FIRST IN A SCHEME TO GET YOUR UNCLE "TOPPER'S" FORTUNE!
WHILE AT TOPPER MCGEE'S CAMP ABOVE THE LANDIN...
GRARLING, I'M GOING TO THE CLAIM OFFICE AND SETTLE THIS MATTER LEGALLY!
OH, YEAH! WELL GET THIS, TOPPER: MY MEN START LOGGIN' THAT NORTH SECTION TOMORROW! AND MY AX'LL CUT DOWN WHO EVER TRIES T' STOP 'EM!

OUR SUITS ARE YOUNG AND GAY!*

With a doff of our beret to Cornelia Otis Skinner, whose best-seller, "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay," is making millions chuckle over the quips, pranks and frolics of two gay girl "Gremlins."*

AND SO ARE THE MAD-CAP, IMP-HEARTED JUNIOR MISSES WHO WEAR THEM!

REMEMBER—JUNIOR MISS IS A SIZE—NOT AN AGE

Youth has its fling—in fashion, this Spring! Net result: Suits as joyously gay as an affectionate prank—suits as frolicsome as a Young Crowd quip—suits so beguilingly out of this world, they put you on top of it—just to wear them! . . . So! . . . The Hecht Co. (suit-headquarters for busy, wartime Washington) . . . gives you "a nod, and a beck and a wreath-ed smile"—and says: If your heart is young and gay—come here—for our suits are that way!

Young Washingtonian Shop, Third Floor, F Street Building, The Hecht Co.
